Prisoner's return touches Burley throng

By DAVID HORSMAN

Times-News Writer

BURLEY — Children sensed the occasion and hushed. Men wept. Captain Larry Chesley was honored here Saturday. He had returned home after nearly seven years' captivity in North Vietnam during America's longest war.

The sight of Larry between his two children, holding their hands, touched the estimated 30,000 people who had gathered in welcome. They needed proof that the war was really over and Larry gave it.

Larry kept his composure until late in the afternoon during ceremonies in the Burley High School gymnasium. But when a choral group began singing "Silent Night," the former prisoner bowed his head, removed his glasses and wiped his eyes with a handkerchief.

The gymnasium ceremony was the culmination of "Larry Chesley Day" in Burley. The day began when Chesley, a 32-year-old Air Force captain, held a 45-minute news conference in the chambers of the Burley City Council at 11 a.m.

He said his reception since returning to the United States has been "truly inspirational." But he refused comment on his treatment while a POW.

"We had an exceptionally good room," Larry said, referring to the tightly knit group of 40 prisoners with whom he was confined during his last years in North Vietnam.

Rather than talk of the unpleasant conditions of his captive life, Chesley stressed the moments of humor.

For instance the time one POW gave the North Vietnamese a taste of nonsensical American humor. The prisoner rode an imaginary motorcycle around the confinement area, Chesley said, and "dumfounded" his captors with guttural motorcycle noises.

The joke went well, with the North Vietnamese suspecting insanity, until the camp commander stopped the high-riding prisoner. The North Vietnamese officer told him, "You are no longer allowed to ride the motorcycle. There isn't enough room to maneuver it in here and we don't allow the other prisoners to have motorcycles."

Christmas was special in the prison camps, Chesley said. The prisoners made Christmas trees out of odds and ends and presented imaginary presents to each other.

Larry said his 1972 gift was a "how to" book on picture taking.

"When we had classes in photography, we used the pictures my mother sent as examples of how not to take pictures," he explained.

Another prisoner was given a blank almanac, Chesley said. The gift-givers told the intelligent prisoner to fill it in himself.

Skits were used by the POW's to pass the time, Larry said. "I cannot remember ever laughing as hard as I did in prison," he said. Chesley said he participated in one of the skits as a female Salvation Army worker collecting nickels. "I reversed my prison shirt and it really did resemble a woman's dress," he added.

"Telling" movies was another favorite pastime. He said he "heard" many movies and was given two Academy Awards for his storytelling. "I won the award for the saddest movie, 'An Affair to Remember,' and the funniest movie, 'Boy's Night Out.' The prisoners also staged two musicals, 'South Pacific' and 'Sound of Music.'"

At the gymnasium program, Chesley said, "I have served my God and my country with pride and returned home with honor. In prison, many of my friends called me Lucky. And I believe I am lucky to be in America, to be Mormon and to be alive."

"I'm so much luckier than many boys who were asked to give their all."

For 24 hours a day during the nearly 2,500 days that I was a prisoner, I thought most about my childhood, my friends and my loved ones in Burley," Chesley said. "Any one of my close friends, I can assure you, have been in my thoughts a million times."

Chesley "analyzed" many people during his captivity. He described one of the instances.

"When I was a junior in high school, one spring a man asked me if I wanted a job on his farm. I took the job and drove a tractor, discing and harrowing for several days."

"Then one Saturday I disced a field and went to another one I thought the farmer had told me to disk."

The other field had been planted in beets a week earlier.

"I could tell he was upset, yet he didn't say a cross word to me," Chesley said, describing the reaction of the farmer to a ruined field of crops. "He took the blame onto himself. I thought about that man that night. His name is Albert Holyoak and he is one of my idols."

Chesley's voice cracked with emotion several times during his talk to the more than 3,000 people assembled in the gymnasium.

"I cannot tell you everything about my treatment as a POW," he referred to the pact made by released prisoners not to discuss the unpleasant aspects of their captivity until all were released.

"Someday there will be books written about the prisons in North Vietnam," he said. "But we must protect our loved ones" who are still being held.

Chesley said he was in a North Vietnamese prison camp that was later raided by American commandos. "We prayed to be moved," he said. "The North Vietnamese moved us, and the raid came." Chesley could only reflect that God had answered his prayers.

today in brief

POW release cancelled

SAIGON — The Viet Cong Saturday cancelled a scheduled exchange of South Vietnamese prisoners because of fighting near a repatriation site.

Viet Cong press officer Phung Nam said the release of 200 South Vietnamese prisoners at Due Tho and Tam Ky north of Saigon would not take place because of military action in the area. The cancellation would not affect the release of 137 American servicemen set tentatively for Wednesday, the Viet Cong spokesman said.

Wage guidelines fluid

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's top domestic adviser John D. Ehrlichman has attempted to clarify the administration's Phase III wage guidelines.

Ehrlichman says the key figure was not the 5.5 per cent recommended wage hike guideline, but rather the administration's goal to reduce the cost of living increase from 3.4 per cent last year to 2.5 per cent by the end of this year.

Constitution crisis ahead

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Saturday predicted a "constitutional crisis" if President Nixon continues to refuse to spend funds appropriated by Congress.

Mansfield said Nixon may be compelled to yield to Congress on the issue of a "stoppage of funds if Congress is to approve funds for reconstruction aid in North Vietnam." And there are other cards that will be shown along the way," Mansfield added.

French showdown nears

PARIS — A grave President Georges Pompidou appealed to French voters Saturday to "consider the consequences" of a Communist victory in today's parliamentary runoff election. The voting will decide whether Communists return to government in France for the first time in 26 years.

In last Sunday's first-round voting, the left-wing Communist-Socialist alliance won about 45 per cent of the overall popular vote, against 30.4 per cent for the Gaullists and 12.4 per cent for the small Reform Movement.

Quint goes home

EVANSTON, Ill. — Elizabeth, tiniest of quintuplets born Jan. 5 to Mr. and Mrs. James Baer, Northbrook, Ill., went home Friday.

Elizabeth, who weighed one pound 11 ounces at birth, weighed four pounds 10 ounces when she left Evanston Hospital.

Australia trembles

SYDNEY — Two brief but violent earth tremors which awakened Sydney residents early Friday morning were among the largest ever recorded in the state.

Measuring 3.5 and 5.7 on the Richter open-ended scale respectively, the tremors resulted in widespread power failures but caused no serious structural damages or injuries.

Nixon hits 'soft' judges, asks death penalty return

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lashing out at "soft-headed judges and probation officers," President Nixon proposed Saturday to restore the death penalty for certain federal crimes and to require the imprisonment without parole for twice-convicted drug felons.

"There are those who say that law and order are just code words for repression and bigotry," Nixon said. "That is dangerous nonsense. Law and order are code words for goodness and decency in America."

In a 13-minute, pre-recorded radio address at noon, his sixth in a series, the President said he would send Congress next week a proposed revision of the entire federal criminal code, including separate legislation on capital punishment and on heavier penalties for drug abuse.

He reaffirmed his strong opposition to even limited legalization of possession, sale or use of marijuana, although he supported more "reasonable" criminal sanctions.

Nixon said Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst had drafted legislation "consistent with the Supreme Court's recent decision on the death penalty" which would provide capital punishment in federal cases of murder and for treason and other war-related crimes.

The Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty, as unevenly administered in various states, was "cruel and unusual punishment" and thus unconstitutional. The administration interpreted the decision as containing a loophole permitting reinstatement of capital punishment in certain federal crimes.

The President gave no specifics Saturday, nor did he indicate whether he thought the death penalty in these cases should be mandatory. But elsewhere in his address was a suggestion he had other crimes in mind.

Government spokesmen said a grand jury would be convened to indict the Indians who occupied the hamlet. An initial reaction of joy among the occupation force changed to distrust "several hours" later when Indian leaders are evaluated by the government.

"Instead of pulling a surprise attack on us, they pulled a surprise surrender," Dennis Banks, a leader in the American Indian Movement (AIM), said. "But we know now it's a trick. They want to open the settlement up so they can arrest us."

Banks made the statement to a rally of about 400 persons crowded inside the trading post.

Indian roadblock lifted

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (UPI) — The federal government Saturday lifted armored roadblocks around this historic Sioux community. Militant Indians who seized it at gunpoint 11 days ago but first hailed the move but later called the government "traitors."

Many of the high school bands in the parade stopped in front of the reviewing stand to chant welcomes to Chesley.

Children were a big part of the parade. They walked or rode in disarray but Chesley observed the remainder of the parade from the stand as the bannered and placarded entries passed in front.

He stood at attention and saluted during much of the parade when the American flag passed.

30,000 welcome Chesley

BURLEY — Nearly 30,000 spectators turned out for the "Larry Chesley Day" parade here Saturday, according to Burley police estimates. The sidewalks began filling up along the 1½-mile-long parade route early in the morning and spectators were crowding the curbs by the 1 p.m. starting time.

Estimates of the participants in the parade ran as high as 2,000. More than 70 vehicle entries jammed the parade staging area on the Overland Shopping Center parking lot.

Captain Larry Chesley took up a high seat on a Burley Fire Department truck and held his daughter, Debbie, 11, and son, Donnie, 9, in his arms.

The fire truck assumed the lead in the parade behind the national colors.

When the first high school band drums were heard, many of the spectators ran to the center of the street to peer down the long route to the starting point on Overland Avenue.

Small children waved miniature American flags from car windows and Chesley took special care to wave at these onlookers.

and the crowd were noticeably touched by their participation.

Perhaps the most dramatic moment of the parade was one of total silence.

As the vehicles carrying the parents and relatives of area men killed in Vietnam passed, the crowd hushed and tears could be seen in eyes.

Burley mayor Garis Robertson, who sat in the reviewing booth, was obviously touched. He removed his eyeglasses and wiped his eyes with a handkerchief. A parade official estimated that 22 Gold Star parents (whose sons died in the war) were represented in the parade.

One of the cars was empty except for the driver. It had the names of Gold Star couples displayed on its side and represented the parents, who could not attend.

7,356 troops remain

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. command said Saturday 7,356 American troops were still in Vietnam with less than three weeks to go before the withdrawal deadline.

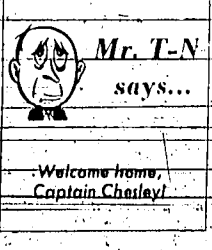

Brig. Gen. John A. Wickham, deputy chief of staff for the U.S. delegation to the Joint Military Commission, said Friday the withdrawal of allied troops was "75 per cent complete."

Under the Paris armistice, all American and allied troops must be pulled out of Vietnam by March 28. The agreement became effective Jan. 28, when the United States had 23,516 men in the war zone.

The command said the figure was made up of 4,801 Army troops, 2,028 airmen, and 527 sailors and marines.

In April, 1969, at the height of involvement, there were 543,000 American servicemen in Vietnam.

The U.S. manpower figures does not include approximately 80,000 American servicemen at air bases in Guam and Thailand and aboard Seventh Fleet ships off the Vietnam coast.

Reds to release POWS Wednesday

SAIGON (UPI) — The third group of American prisoners of war was tentatively scheduled to be repatriated next Wednesday, sources said Saturday. The United States has demanded that the names of the prisoners be released.

The Viet Cong Saturday canceled the release of 250 South Vietnamese soldiers because of government military action, but the sources said release of the Americans would not be affected.

Repatriation of the Americans was linked in the armistice only to the withdrawal of U.S. forces, which was 75 per cent complete.

Capt. Phung Nam, a Viet Cong press officer, said the Communists canceled the release of 200 South Vietnamese prisoners at Duc Pho, 307 miles northeast of Saigon, and 50 soldiers at Tam Ky, 33 miles farther north, because of South Vietnamese military action in the Duc Pho area.

Asked if the decision would affect the scheduled release of the Americans, Nam said the chief of the Viet Cong delegation to JMC, Lt. Gen. Trung Van Tra, "did not make anything clear on that point." He did not elaborate. Final approval of the American release must be made by the JMC's chief delegates. No mention was made of freedom for 13 American civilians still being held by the Communists, spokesmen for both sides reported.

A Wednesday release would follow the schedule set up in the peace agreement ending the Vietnam war. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have freed 208 military prisoners and 11 civilians—all Americans—since the ceasefire went into effect Jan. 28. A total of 286 remain in Communist hands.

A U.S. spokesman confirmed the JMC's submission on captured persons agreed to follow the release schedule but did not set a specific date.

The Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG-Viet Cong) said they would abide by the time frame in the agreement, he said. However, the chief U.S. delegate to the JMC, Maj. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, wrote the Communists, demanding details on the next release by Sunday.

THE SHOCKING TRUTH... ABOUT WATER!

There seems to be a miraculous transformation occurring in people when they start drinking only distilled water. We really do not know why this happens. There seems to be no more scientific proof for this than there is scientific proof that there is a God yet I know there is a God.

Multitudes suffer from all kinds of diseases and they unknowingly contribute to their causes by the type water and food they take into their bodies. Whether it is the inorganic minerals, the fluoride or chlorine, we are not qualified to say. However, we know these different chemicals affect different people in different ways, particularly in the middle age bracket.

The body is made up of 70% water and it only makes good common sense that the type water we drink has a lot to do with the way we feel. We have hundreds of people who have written us stating that drinking only distilled water has made a radical change in their lives.

Some people say we need the minerals in water. Even if these minerals were organic and the body could use them, water is certainly not our only source of minerals. Fresh fruits and vegetables are loaded with them. So why not clean up the water of all the chemicals and poisons, eat a good balanced diet and take organic minerals orally?

We have been researching this for three and a half years, and we sincerely feel that we have something which will help some people. However, we want to make our position clear. We do not claim to have a panacea (cure-all) for anything. To understand why this transformation occurs, you would have to read our booklet, "The Choice is Clear" written by a famous doctor. This will be followed by other literature, but no salesman will call.

We think you owe it to yourself to write for this booklet. Send $2 to Aqua-Naligan, Dept. B, Box 11728, Lincoln, Nebraska 68501. If this booklet does not impress you, return it and we will refund your money without question. Send now while the supply lasts!

Pearl Buck buried

DUBLIN, Pa. (UPI) — Nobel laureate Pearl S. Buck, surrounded by her adopted children whose cause gained her fame as a humanitarian as well as a novelist, was buried Friday amid a stand of white birch, ash and evergreens she planted 40 years ago.

Miss Buck, 80, whose books on China gave millions of Americans their first glimpse of that Far Eastern culture, died Tuesday at her second home in Danby, Vt. She had suffered several illnesses recently, including an operation for removal of her gall bladder.

The funeral was private with about only 40 close relatives attending the simple ceremony on her Green Hill Farm near this eastern Pennsylvania community.

Her nine adopted children and their families were present.

Many of Miss Buck's children were of mixed blood—the Asian offspring of American servicemen. Known as Amerasians, their cause was championed by Miss Buck, who poured millions of dollars into homes for them in the Far East and in the United States.

She had one natural daughter who was retarded.

The back on the Giant Sequoia tree is often at least two feet thick.

O.E.O. Failed

One of the most ambitious anti-poverty programs of the Johnson administration is the Office of Economic Opportunity, which has spent billions without doing much for the needy or anybody else except the top-heavy bureaucracy it spawned.

The reason for its signal failure to help the poor is easy to see. Its payroll and administrative costs ate up as much as 85 per cent of allotted funds. That alone is reason enough to scrap O.E.O.

There are other good and sufficient reasons for the O.E.O. to go, one being its political activity.

Professional anti-poverty politicians squawk that if O.E.O. dies billions in federal aid will be snatched from the hands of the poor. That is completely untrue, a false alarm raised by the officeholders who have taken the cream and most of the milk.

The truth is that anti-poverty programs worth keeping will be shifted into existing government departments capable of doing a far better job for less cost than the fat cats of O.E.O. Federal outlays will continue near their present levels. The crux of the debate is not whether the poor should be aided but how best to do it.

President Nixon's approach is much more practical and more likely to succeed in giving help to the poor instead of disappointment.

Howard Phillips, acting director of O.E.O., who was given the job of dismantling that vast and unwieldy machinery, easily demolished the self-serving report of the bureaucrats trumpeting the achievements of Community Action Programs. Phillips said that of 900 existing CAP agencies, overhead runs as high as 85 per cent of available funds, leaving little for the only purpose of O.E.O. — aid to the poor.

Naturally, the unneeded bureaucrats are fighting to keep their lucrative sinecures and shedding crocodile tears for the needy. And some Democrats are playing their usual role of opposing anything the President is for.

We need economic opportunity for the underprivileged. We do not need a hog in the trough of money meant to help the poor.

more extreme forms of modern art may find the tide turning back in its direction. There are indications that there is a distinct movement away from the extreme aspects of contemporary art.

Disseminating critics are writing that the leaders in the fields of painting and sculpture are producing works that are "more humanistic and more readable," to quote one writer.

Artists are not returning to the type of photographic realism which some laymen prefer. Not only has the camera outmoded that approach, but also too much of beauty and meaning has come into the world of art from the remarkable achievements in modern art in the last half century.

But some truly creative minds are wondering whether the extreme forms of modern art have not turned into a dead end. Without imitation, there may be little more that can be done in this field and the only way to go is back to more recognizable forms.

The situation might be simplified and some of the confusion eliminated by a distinction between use of the words "work of art" and "decoration." A painting — to take an extreme example — which consists of two shades of the same color in a simple geometric or irregular pattern, should be called a decoration.

There is no intention of belittling decoration. But though some of the non-objective paintings and sculpture are handsome, they fail to excite much more than a pleasant reaction, rather than a deeper intellectual response.

An artist must communicate with his fellow men. After a period when this seemed secondary to many artists, it is good to know that a change may be coming.

Less Aloof Now

The tragic shooting of Sen. John Stennis has to have a reason and a purpose.

Maybe, maybe, the same members of Congress and the Supreme Court who have managed to live every tower lives aloof from street crime will feel less aloof now — will be less preoccupied with the rights of wrongdoers.

The congressional bug Three of the 1960s were Lyndon B. Johnson, Everett Dirksen and Richard Russell, unequally yoked politically, but personally very close friends.

I remember L.B.J. was the first majority leader to get a telephone in his limousine. An administration later, when Sen. Dirksen got his car phone, he waited in front of L.B.J.'s suburban house, followed him to work.

Stanford P. Crutch, a Washington power broker, told me, "Congress has been wasting its powers for years. It has always thought the Constitution would provide it with ample resources to use power in any way it wanted to. Well, they've discovered that there isn't that much power around, and because the White House has been using so much of it, there's very little left to pump up to the Hill."

Then you believe that the power shortage in Congress has been caused by White House demands for more power in domestic and foreign affairs?

That is correct," Crutch said. "At one time, power was equally divided between the White House and Capitol Hill. No one was concerned because there was enough to go around for everybody. But since the November election, the White House has doubled its power needs and has been draining Congress on the little energy it had."

What does this mean to the country? "It's obvious that without sufficient power resources, Congress will be unable to function anywhere near its capacity. If the power crisis continues for another few months, you may have to close down the Senate and House of Representatives three or four days a week."

Power Shortage

One of the groups most seriously affected by this winter's power crisis has been the Congress of the United States. While the rest of the country has managed to get by, Capitol Hill seems to be losing the energy battle, and experts predict that if President Nixon pursues his present policies, Congress will be completely out of power by 1974.

Stanford P. Crutch, a Washington power broker, told me, "Congress has been wasting its powers for years. It has always thought the Constitution would provide it with ample resources to use power in any way it wanted to. come home and find out what it's like for us ordinary folks. Maybe the Stennis tragedy will help bring home to him."

President It is essential to the national interests of the country that the President be provided with all the power he can grab. If he shared any of the power with Congress, his entire Administration would be weakened and the American people would suffer.

Are there any new technological breakthroughs in power that could alleviate the congressional shortage?

None in the foreseeable future. One of the reasons Congress is suffering so is that it has the most antiquated power plant in the United States. The power came from ancient Senate and House committees, which have refused to modernize their methods for 100 years. As long as there was a surplus of power, Congress did nothing to improve the system. But now that their power has been drained away, every legislator is screaming for new ways of getting back the power they've lost.

Will the cost of power go up because of the shortage? I asked Crutch.

The price of power has been rising steadily for many years. The President has already warned Congress that if it wants power next year, it will have to pay dearly for it.

What would it cost Congress?

In return for getting back some of its power, Congress will have to go along with all the President's fiscal programs, as well as his foreign policies.

That is expensive," I said. "Isn't there enough gas up on Capitol Hill to keep its plant going?"

Yes, gas has been one of the main sources of congressional power. But because there is no concentration of power on the Hill, most of the gas is being wasted on hope consumption. If Congress could figure out some way of harnessing the gas that is manufactured at the Capitol every day, it would have enough power to light up the city of Chicago."

guaranteeing equal rights for women. Balderdash. In fact, it would guarantee equal rights for men, because the amendment reads: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Well, girls, male is a sex, too, and if ERA becomes a part of the Constitution I plan to demand my rights. For example, a girl today has a right to get loaded at the neighborhood saloon and otherwise misbehave, but she also has the right to be protected by some male if the going gets rough. No doll has ever thrown a left hook in my behalf, but come ERA I shall pick a fight with that linebacker down the street and expect Molly to come to my rescue, duking held high.

A guy sees a pretty girl and makes a pass. His chances are real good of getting slapped in the face and possibly arrested. A girl makes a pass at a guy and he is barred from committing mayhem because his attacker traces her lineage back to Adam's rib. ERA will make it legal for me to defend myself against a would-be female seducer. A little one, anyway.

So please, girls, knock off this ERA jazz. A woman may not be Nature's noblest creation, on account of there is something in a poker game called a royal flush, but she is a close second. Even today some girls can be described as cuddly kittens for whom males will gladly buy mink coats, diamond necklaces, and sneaked a glance at the opposite sex. Granted, some females look more like men than some men and most of these huskies could put me away in the first round, but it is not necessary to inter-ethnic detail to argue that even those types possess the difference the French have always greeted with a delighted "Vive!"

I join my Gallic friends in their salute to the way things are, sex-wise. Put simply, I like the idea of there being two sexes. For the most part, girls are prettier than boys, and they are more artfully constructed. They are more fun to eat dinner with and to hold hands with. Kissing the right female is even nicer than kissing the back of a baby's neck.

Moreover, women already have it made, and if Bella Abzug & Co. succeed in improving woman's lot any more, we American males may run away from home and seek our fortunes in Somalia. It may still be a man's world in those areas untainted by civilization, but in America the girls have it made.

They have it both ways, living a life of sweet dependence with independence thrown in. Any doll whose face does not resemble the south side of a hedgehog can pretty much write her own ticket as to how she wants to be treated by a man. One day she can have the guy fetching and carrying for her and picking up the check at a $50-per-steak restaurant, and the next she can turn tough and threaten to take a job as Henry Kissinger's date.

ERA, of course, is a fraud, the feminists deserve it as

Sinus Trouble

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I please write about the cause of sinus trouble and is there any cure for it? I have been bothered for several years. It seems to get worse in fall and winter.

W.D.B.

The cause. There are several, chief among them being chronic infection, allergies, polyps in the nasal passages or some past injury that has partially obstructed the passage involved.

Treatment therefore varies considerably, to suit whichever cause is involved. My booklet discusses all of them, and I gather that you'd like a fairly detailed discussion more than I could put in a column, or several columns. Why not send for the booklet? Send 25 cents in coin, and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope, and ask for "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble." Carefully sinus cases are pretty difficult to treat with total success, but there aren't many that can't be made much better with the right treatment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother recently told me that rats carry the germ which causes mononucleosis. Our daughter is just recovering from mononucleosis and we do have a rat. I would like to know if this information is correct or not.

Corrected. It is the title of Dr. Thosteson's booklet explaining the causes and cure of bad breath. For a copy write to him in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all regular mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Pure Air "Cures" Termed Costly, Wasteful

By O.A. GUS KILKER
Editor, Times-News

Severe restrictions of the 1970 amendments to the Clean Air Act will require increased consumption of the nation's limited petroleum resources. It will end up in forcing upon the nation expensive "cures" that can only be wasteful, temporary expedients.

These amendments, calling for nearly total elimination of automotive emissions by 1974-76 will result in an inflationary rise in the cost of owning and driving an automobile, in an aggravation of the energy crisis, and in further detriment to the nation's balance of payments. These disruptions will occur while only slight improvement is made in the quality of our air over what could be achieved through alternative strategies at much lower costs.

Among the people concerned over the turn of events in the drive for pure air are those at the Texaco Co. Texaco, Inc. Officials of that company, to back their contentions that the 1975-76 standards be reexamined, have issued a "white paper" which has been distributed to various individuals and various arms of the news media including the Times-News.

"We are disturbed by the imbalances which have developed as a result of currently legislated rules to protect air quality, especially with respect to automotive emissions," the paper says. "The responsibility for setting realistic environmental goals rests primarily with the government. As part of the petroleum industry, our company has a responsibility to help achieve governmental standards. But we believe that it is important to our citizens, and to government itself, that the funds which the nation can afford to devote to air quality are spent wisely and without waste."

The "white paper" contends that "unfortunately, the 1970 amendments to the Clean Air Act have foreclosed access to many possible methods and opportunities for solving the automotive emissions problems effectively and economically. They have done so by setting arbitrary deadlines for the satisfaction of arbitrary requirements."

The paper contends that the most restrictive provision has mandated that, by the 1975 model year for automobiles, emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons be reduced by 90 per cent from 1970 model levels, and that by 1976, nitrogen oxide emissions be reduced by 90 per cent from the uncontrolled levels of the 1971 model cars.

"These arbitrary reductions were stipulated even before the establishment of national standards for ambient air quality," the report says.

This 90 per cent reduction in specific emissions from the 1970-71 levels is not currently supported on a technically sound basis.

"It is well recognized by the scientific community and others that obtaining the last increment of emission reduction from automobiles is going to be extremely costly — an increment that is not necessary to protect human health and welfare. Where such reductions are clearly needed and can be made without major disruptions to the nation, the appropriate standards should certainly be imposed. But to go beyond the point of need is to waste the nation's resources," the paper declared.

Among other things, the paper contends:

(1) The ultimate cost of emission control equipment and changes in fuel requirements will, in the end, fall most heavily on the automobile owner himself.

(2) The new cars built to comply with even the 1972 federal requirements consume about 7 to 10 per cent more fuel than the older, unregulated cars at equivalent performance levels. Moreover, the experimental cars give significantly poorer performance.

(3) The marketing of unleaded and low-lead gasoline required will force tremendous refinery investments which must necessarily be reflected in the price of products to the motorist.

(4) The exhausted cycle devices that will be necessary to control nitrogen oxide emissions as required by the 1976 standards are still under development. To meet the 1976 standards will induce an estimated mileage penalty of at least 10 per cent.

(5) The cars themselves will cost more. The 1976 model cars will cost several hundred dollars more than the cars of today.

"What all this means is that the motorist will have to pay substantially more for both his replacement automobile and the fuel required to make it run."

A study by the office of Science and Technology in 1972 compared costs of automotive emission controls with benefit — prevention of all measurable damage to health, property, material and vegetation. According to this study, the excess of costs over measurable benefits during the 10 years 1976 to 1985 will fall somewhere between $18.0 billion and $76.8 billion. These lower and upper levels average out at about $63 billion excess cost — an astonishing figure that the American motoring public may be forced to spend to achieve the last increments of reduction that do not significantly improve air quality."

The report stipulates. The company contends that the legislation fails to benefit the health of the people or to foster solutions to the nation's environmental problems that are compatible with good economic practices and with conservation of the nation's limited energy resources.

In Texaco's view, the Congress should further amend the 1970 amendments to the Clean Air Act to empower appropriate governmental agencies to establish new standards for automotive emissions. Such new standards should be based on a thorough study of the expectable benefits costs, feasibility and impact on the nation's energy resources. Implementation of the 1975-76 standards for vehicle emissions should be deferred in the interim.

Further, Texaco said in the paper, "we believe that the Congress should require a prompt reevaluation of the national standards for ambient air quality and the criteria used for setting these standards. This study should take into account not only the contribution of the automobile and other man-made sources to air pollution levels, but also the contribution that nature itself makes. It should also recognize the varying geographical and meteorological conditions that exist across the nation. A single standard for clean air quality on a nationwide basis may not be medically, scientifically, economically and socially defensible. This point has suddenly come into sharp focus in California where EPA's proposal for enabling Southern California to meet current ambient air standards calls for drastic reductions in vehicular transportation in parts of the state."

These reforms should be given the highest priorities. The action called for by the existing legislation has already begun. Once this action is well advanced, no law can recover the billions of dollars and millions of manhours that, whether warranted or not, will have been spent on implementation of the law a cost that, inevitably, will be paid by the American people.

Background Of PTA

Editor, Times-News

In a recent column distributed by the Los Angeles Times News Syndicate, Max Rafferty once again demonstrated his capacity for jumping to conclusions, unconfused by facts. I refer to his column, "National and local PTAs go separate ways."

Oddly enough he had to resort to half truths, distortions and untruths in order to build his case against us, really, a compliment to the PTA — a result obviously contrary to his contention.

Let us be fair. There is one completely accurate statement in the article. "Most local PTA members are decent, concerned and reasonable citizens." Isn't it interesting to note that these same people become those "state and national representatives" who Dr. Rafferty says "tend more and more to be just the opposite" when they take convention action that he implies is so reprehensible?

Dr. Rafferty states a number of "stands or activities of the PTA" which he says indicate "the increasingly rabid dogmatism of the PTA establishment." Let us look at those rabid dogmatists. First, the National PTA did not pass a resolution calling for withdrawing American forces from Southeast Asia, at its national convention last May in New York. The resolution to which he refers was proposed from the floor and after thoughtful debate, was defeated.

Long, reasonable debate, particularly on many proposed amendments preceded adoption in convention on a resolution which admitted "bussing is one of the acceptable methods of providing quality education for all children, and calling for a meeting to search for solutions that would by rational means reduce racial isolation through transportation and to develop other viable methods of providing equality education."

If this is the unequivocal support of forced bussing as Dr. Rafferty implies, we suggest that he needs a new dictionary.

The Commemorative Stamp issued by the United States Post Office honoring the PTA September 1972 became a reality through the efforts of the National, the states and local units of PTA striving to promote the welfare of children and youth, to raise the standard of home life, to secure laws for the protection of children and youth, expressed in 100,000 letters from local units and from state and national leaders, reflecting a united response greater than that given for any other Commemorative Stamp issued.

The school lunch, now recognized as indispensable was originated by the PTA and sustained by these local PTA members for twenty five years before the U.S. Government accepted it as a public necessity. The PTA program for physical, mental and emotional health, the program on "Smoking and Health," the program on Drug Abuse and such programs as "Know Your School," countless scholarships given for teacher training for the education of the exceptional child, all are and have been supported by the local units of PTA, over the nation.

It is true that PTA has lost membership over the last several years before the wide spread publicity about activism that Dr. Rafferty decries. Contingent to his report, however, memberships are now increasing in many areas, including Idaho, and at present the greatest gains are in the south.

Surely it was "proper" for Idaho PTA to institute a suit to stop a violation of the state law which would divert funds from the education of our children into other channels, sometimes for private profit. The PTA had the support of other responsible groups willing to follow an organization whose sole concern is for children and youth.

Dr. Rafferty also reported, inaccurately, that the Chicago PTA sponsored a mass rally to protest teacher layoffs. The National President says that the Chicago PTA actually protested the closing of schools twelve days prior to the usual Christmas vacation. PTA members who have spent hours of study and work on the problem of the financial crisis in education are not convinced that the only solution is a budgetary — problem is depriving the children of time. The PTA knows that the complex problem of financing education will not yield to Dr. Rafferty's simplistic solution.

When has it become interference for parents to seek improvement in the schools? Why shouldn't they participate in some decision making if, as the PTA policy clearly states, they recognize legal responsibility to make decisions has been delegated by the people to Boards of Education.

The California Convention delegates protested when the Governor failed to keep his promises, but it had nothing to do with the Governor's political persuasion. They touch partisan matters only in the broadest sense when the issue is on the welfare of children.

Mrs. Mallory, our president says, we are proud of those PTAs and all the others who espouse partisan issues to protect children and youth. Though they never endorse individuals in politics, the PTAs for 75 years have endorsed issues that affect the youth of America. If this is indecent, unconcerned and irresponsible, so be it. We will continue to urge and help all PTAs to continue such positive action for the sake of all children and youth.

Letter Comment

Editor, Times-News

This letter is in reply to L. J. Ettinger's letter in Sunday's, February 25, issue of the Public Forum, which stated Mr. Swenson's article condemning the Supreme Court Justices for their decision regarding abortion as a barmy ranting attack on the Supreme Court Justices.

Mr. Ettinger feels the same way the Supreme Court Justices do and believes in legalized murder of those who are unable to defend themselves, is no sign the majority of civilized human beings share his blood thirsty views.

Mr. Swenson, as do the majority of the rest of us, is tired of seven men called Supreme Court Justices in Washington D.C. trying to force the entire nation to do as they say. Why do the Supreme Court Justices think they are? They have tried to occupy God's seat by saying you must allow the slaughter. Only God has the right to give and take life. Repeat only God has this right.

It seems the Supreme Court has taken the State's rights away to make their own laws. Each State is having their laws slapped down by these seven little men. The Supreme Court Justices have now become the makers of the laws of the entire land. Wake up! What has happened to our rights? We have lost our right to govern ourselves with representation. The Supreme Court governs the laws of the States.

As far as I'm concerned, Mr. Swenson is a wonderful person with high standards who has the courage to speak out against injustice. As you recall he was also against X-rated movies in a past article.

I for one will miss Mr. Swenson for my business and I'm sure many more citizens will be likewise.

To remind Mr. Ettinger that as he stated, the Swenson stories are easily bypassed but so are the Pearly Gates for those who condone this type of murder.

I wish to take issue with some statements in your editorial of February 23, 1972. You accuse the Idaho Education Association of dragging its feet in the matter of improvement of education in Idaho. If you will acquaint yourself with the history of education in Idaho you will find that the Idaho Education Association has either initiated or supported every move for educational improvement in the last forty years and possibly longer. The IEA is not at present opposed to kindergartens if the state legislature will provide funds, but is unwilling to add an extra burden to a school system that is now, and has always been, inadequately funded.

Anyone who writes in the public press in an attempt to influence public opinion should have all the facts, including the fact that Idaho ranks 47th in the 50 states in the amount expended per pupil in grades 1 through 12 and 40th in average teacher salary. Now you are advocating that we add another grade, cutting the salary pie 13 ways instead of twelve, adding about 8 per cent more people to the payroll, but you do not advocate any increase in funding.

I have not discussed your editorial with Mr. York, but I am sure that his position is that we should not expand the educational system until we

We have always maintained that public kindergartens would be in order if the people were told how much money tax payers would need to provide to support them and were given a chance to vote on the decision. This bill gives local school patrons a "vote" but it is really a vote. If a patron votes "yes," he pays tax money to support kindergartens. If the district vote "no" for kindergartens, local patrons still have to pay taxes into the state school fund. Therefore, if a certain community votes "no," it's people must pay for some other school district's kindergartens.

2. We do not know where the "surplus" money came from that will support the proposed Kindergarten program. Did it come from a source that is likely to be there next year and the next? If not, additional tax money will be required in future years to keep the kindergartens going and taxes will go up. Or it could be provided by cutting existing educational programs or teachers' salaries. None of these seems desirable to us.

Since we were afraid our legislators would think our testimony biased at the hearing, we did not appear. We would like you to know one thing, though, for sure and for certain. No survey shows accurately and no one knows how many of our State's Kindergarten-age children are

2. We do not know where the "surplus" money came from that will support the proposed Kindergarten program. Did it come from a source that is likely to be there next year and the next? If not, additional tax money will be required in future years to keep the kindergartens going and taxes will go up. Or it could be provided by cutting existing educational programs or teachers' salaries. None of these seems desirable to us.

Since we were afraid our legislators would think our testimony biased at the hearing, we did not appear. We would like you to know one thing, though, for sure and for certain. No survey shows accurately and no one knows how many of our State's Kindergarten-age children are

The following is a letter which was sent to Magic Valley Legislators at Boise. We believe it is of public interest through the Forum columns of the Times-News.

"Our organization consists of private kindergarten teachers who meet together to improve our individual schools and keep current on the latest teaching methods and materials. We all know the value of kindergartens as we are presently providing this advantage to the youngsters of our communities."

You may think we have a "vested interest" and should not speak on this issue, but we are taxpayers, too, and in the latter capacity would like to question the proposed Kindergarten legislation soon to come up for your vote.

1. We have always maintained that public kindergartens would be in order if the people were told how much money tax payers would need to provide to support them and were given a chance to vote on the decision. This bill gives local school patrons a "vote" but it is really a vote. If a patron votes "yes," he pays tax money to support kindergartens. If the district vote "no" for kindergartens, local patrons still have to pay taxes into the state school fund. Therefore, if a certain community votes "no," it's people must pay for some other school district's kindergartens.

2. We do not know where the "surplus" money came from that will support the proposed Kindergarten program. Did it come from a source that is likely to be there next year and the next? If not, additional tax money will be required in future years to keep the kindergartens going and taxes will go up. Or it could be provided by cutting existing educational programs or teachers' salaries. None of these seems desirable to us.

Since we were afraid our legislators would think our testimony biased at the hearing, we did not appear. We would like you to know one thing, though, for sure and for certain. No survey shows accurately and no one knows how many of our State's Kindergarten-age children are

To have and . . .

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ever wonder where the phrase "to have and to hold" comes from? It comes from the solemnization of matrimony in "The Book of Common Prayer." The passage goes like this: "To have and to hold from this day forward, for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death do us part, according to God's holy ordinance; and thereto I plight my troth."

Legislature approves big school aid boost

By DAVID ESPO Times-News writer
BOISE — The Senate passed 29-4 Friday a $63.25 million appropriations bill for public schools for the next year and then quarrelled for two hours over whether to allow some senators to explain their votes in the official journal.

The measure has already passed the House by the vote of 66-0, and now goes to the governor for his consideration. The total appropriations includes $54.3 million from the general fund, $8 million from recurring revenue sharing the state will receive from the federal government, and $950,000 from sales tax receipts. In addition to the appropriations, the Senate approved a letter of intent saying it wanted school districts to give teachers and non-certified school employees a five per cent salary increase for two successive years.

Sen. John Peavey, R-Rupert, floor sponsor of the school funding bill, said the public is certainly willing to go along with more money for schools. He cited as evidence voter approval in 28 of 40 districts last year that held override

Tax relief OK'd

BOISE — Acting under suspension of rules the Senate approved two House-initiated bills Saturday to provide $6.1 million in tax relief. A bill to increase to $15 from $10 the grocery allowance credit on income taxes for one year went through the Senate 32-0 without debate.

Sen. James Stollehoff, D-Sandpoint, steered the property tax relief bill to passage. He said for those senators looking for equalization this was a good approach.

Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, agreed. He said the bill provides considerable relief and equalization to 102 of Idaho's 115 districts.

Aquifer measure gets nod

Special to the Times-News
BOISE — The Senate Resource and Environment Committee reversed itself Friday and gave approval to a measure designed to protect the water in Idaho's underground aquifer.

The committee had refused to allow the measure to the floor of the Senate earlier this week, but gave it a "do pass" recommendation at its meeting Friday. The measure has already passed the House.

School redraft plan sent to death

BOISE (UPI) — Upset because of amendments made to the proposal, the House sent back to committee for a quiet death Saturday a bill to create a school district reorganization commission.

Sen. John Sessions, R-Driggs, the one who proposed the amendments, said he did not like the legislature to "override and impose mandatory consolidation without the opportunity of school districts to express their wishes."

Adjournment evades solons

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's 42nd Legislature stumbled in a final adjournment drive and must return to its labors again Monday.

Senators approved a resolution that would create a citizens committee directed to study and advise the legislature on how best to reform itself and improve its image. They also completed action on a memorial asking congress to propose a constitutional amendment giving states the option of regulating abortions.

Bids asked soon on jail

TWIN FALLS — County Commissioner Mel Leonard said Friday the board of commissioners expects to be able to call for bids in the very near future for remodeling of the county jail.

He said a meeting is scheduled for next week by a committee of city and county officials at which time contractor estimates on the remodeling program will be presented and plans made for a call for bids.

Leonard said the improvement has been planned since last year and was delayed when a jail break resulted in broken water pipes and damage to the fourth floor jail area and ceilings in the courtyard below the fourth floor.

He said the need is critical for juvenile male and female quarters in the county jail at this time and the remodeling project is designed largely to provide this space and to generally improve and expand jail facilities.

Under the new regulation of housing all prisoners in the county jail the old facility is overcrowded, Leonard said.

3 face trials on cattle theft

TWIN FALLS — Magistrate Judge Daniel Meehl Friday ordered three young west-count residents bound over to district court on grand larceny charges.

The three, William Elwin Bragg III, 24; Steven R. Shuckelford, 22; and Susan Mendini, 23, all Buhl, were ordered held for district court action in a ruling issued by Judge Meehl following a preliminary hearing.

Judge Meehl took the case under advisement following the Feb. 2 preliminary hearing. The trio is charged with grand larceny involving the alleged theft of two white face calves from the Easterday Farms southwest of Buhl on Jan. 13.

Judge Meehl continued bond at $2,000 for Bragg and $1,000 for each of the other suspects.

The club recently finished carpeting the children's library and will install playground equipment in one section of Rock Creek Park. Carl Schelle, Twin Falls Club president, was in charge of arrangements for the meeting.

Proposed cut in court funds poses problems

TWIN FALLS — District court judges here said Friday the proposed curtailment in funds for courts could create a serious problem.

Fifth Judicial District judges indicated they would have no alternative but to wait and see what develops if funds are limited for the courts so as to prohibit all travel expenses for the judges, court reporters and for the suspension of court reporters to a leave without pay status.

Judge Theron W. Ward said it goes without saying the courts cannot function without court reporters.

In the fifth district, Judges Ward and Cunningham also cover Jerome County, traveling there for court sessions on a regular basis.

Senior Court Judge Charles Scoggin covers several counties including Blaine, Gooding, Lincoln and Camas.

Judge James M. Cunningham said there is nothing he can say at this time but he feels a solution can be reached.

Judge Ward also indicated he feels there would be a means of continuing the court procedures in all counties of the state.

The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee has turned down a request from the Idaho Supreme Court for an additional approximately $48,000 beyond a supplemental $46,500 amount granted earlier. Chief Justice Charles Donaldson told the committee unless the latest request is granted it would be necessary to eliminate all travel expenses for judges and reporters, leaving some 28 counties without district court services.

DWIGHT SUTTERFIELD assigned

News Of Servicemen

TWIN FALLS — Airman Dwight D. Sutterfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy D. Sutterfield, Route 1, Twin Falls, has been assigned to Keeler AFB, Miss., after completing Air Force basic training.

During his six weeks at the Air Training Command's Lackland AFB, Tex., he studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations.

The airman has been assigned to the Technical Training Center at Keeler for specialized training in the armament systems field.

Airman Sutterfield, a 1954 graduate of Twin Falls High School, attended the College of Southern Idaho.

HEYBURN — US Air Force M. Sgt. Melvin D. Pfeifer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Pfeifer, Heyburn, has arrived for duty at Tyndall AFB, Fla. Sgt. Pfeifer, an armament systems technician, is assigned to a unit of the Aerospace Defense Command which protects the US against hostile aircraft and missiles. He previously served at Malmstrom AFB, Mont.

The sergeant attended Paul schools prior to entering the Air Force in 1954. His wife is the former Carol D. Can't, ell.

TWIN FALLS — Airman L.C. Charlotte D. Pace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Adkins, Shelby, N.C., has arrived for duty at Langley AFB, Va.

Airman Pace, an information specialist, is assigned to a unit of the Tactical Air Command which provides air support for US ground forces. She previously served at Andrews AFB, Md.

Warning issued on model rockets

TWIN FALLS — Fire department officials have announced a campaign against dangerous model rockets which have become popular with young people in recent years.

Fred Higgins, fire marshal, said the model rockets are classified as dangerous fireworks and as such are illegal.

He said the model rockets are sold generally in kits by hobby outlets and are assembled and "launched" by youngsters.

"So far we have been lucky. There have been no serious fires or injuries from them in Twin Falls but in other areas such incidents have resulted," Higgins said.

He urged parents to cooperate with the city ordinance which prohibits "skyrockets and rockets," including all similar devices employing any combustible or explosive material and which rise in the air during discharge.

Higgins said a warning is being issued now and the department plans to investigate the use of model rockets or home-made rockets. Those located will be confiscated and turned over to the police department for legal action.

The model rocket engine, he said, is classified as an explosive under the Department of Transportation regulations although sold in "limited" quantities.

The city ordinance also stipulates it is illegal to sell "dangerous fireworks," Higgins reminded merchants. He said several years ago a "homemade rocket in which a young boy used a ball point pen cartridge for a rocket exploded, sending the cartridge into his heart. Miraculously the boy survived despite the near fatal injury.

Higgins quoted the city ordinance: "It shall be unlawful for any person in the city of Twin Falls to import, export, offer for sale, sell, possess, keep or store or permit the keeping or storing of any dangerous fireworks for any use or purpose except that a person holding a 'dangerous fireworks permit' issued by the city may use them for safely supervised public display of fireworks."

"Any information we receive concerning the use, sale or storage of model rockets or any other illegal commodity or product will be turned over to the Twin Falls police department for investigation and prosecution," Higgins said.

Fall sessions planned to aid senior citizens

BURLEY Five educational sessions designed to help retired and other elderly residents in health and safety matters will begin in this area in September.

Known as the VIM program (Vigor in Maturity), it is sponsored by the Retired Teachers' Association and Association of Retired Persons of the Mini-Cassia area.

W. Herbert Kennedy, executive for the Mini-Cassia Chapter, American Association of Retired Persons said the VIM program consists of five sessions scheduled as follows:

Session I, Sept. 11; Session II, Sept. 18; Session III, Sept. 25; Session IV, Oct. 2; and Session V, Oct. 9. Each VIM session will spotlight areas of health which concern older persons.

calling Charles M. Shadduck, president of the chapter at 578-8808. Additional announcements will be made prior to the opening session in September.

Kennedy said VIM is only one of the many services offered by the four-million member association, the nation's largest organization dedicated to helping older persons achieve independence, dignity and purpose in retirement.

Other services include recommended health, life, and automobile insurance programs, a temporary employment service, pharmacies, offering prescription medicines and other health items at reasonable prices on a walk-in and mail-order basis, a travel service geared to mature needs, continuing education program and award-winning publications.

The association also sponsors numerous service projects designed to keep older Americans actively involved in community and national affairs, Kennedy said.

All persons 55 years of age or older, retired or not, are eligible for membership in AARP. Persons who have been associated in any capacity with a school system, public or private, are eligible for NRTA. Annual membership dues are $2.

For further information about the association, write AARP-NRTA, 1225 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Measle clinic set Monday at Rupert

RUPERT A "hard-red" measles-immunization clinic will be held here Monday from 9 to 11 a.m. in the Rupert Civic Building.

Mrs. Ellen Jackson, public health nurse, said "increased incidence of the virus disease in Magic Valley counties prompted the clinic."

Minidoka and Cassia County children between the age of 1 and 12 will be vaccinated Monday for a 50-cent registration fee.

McCarlson said. Three-day (rubella) measles vaccinations will also be available under the same registration fee.

The health official emphasized he need for "hard-red" measles immunization because of severe complications that can result from contraction of the disease.

She said the clinic will be held under sponsorship of the South Central Health District.

This mob's for Welk

IT'S NOT A ROCK CONCERT, and the policeman has probably had riot training, but how do you control a mob of senior citizens rushing the stage to get Lawrence Welk's autograph? Officials managed to keep control Thursday as the champagne music maker gave a concert in a hall of the Miami Beach Convention Center.

Gradual global removal of all tariffs sought

By MIKE FEINSLBER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seeking to signal the world that free trade sympathy still lives in Congress, the Joint International Economics Subcommittee has unanimously and bipartisanship called for the gradual, global removal of all tariffs over the next two decades.

At the same time, the subcommittee proposes that Congress arm President Nixon with the broad discretionary authority Nixon says he'll need in trade talks next September: power to raise or lower import barriers in response to other countries' actions.

But the subcommittee added a twist Nixon is not expected to seek when he unveils his trade bill. It would give Congress 60 days to veto the action when a President erects a surcharge against one country or one product.

"The subcommittee's report, 'A New Initiative to Liberalize International Trade,' was rushed out Thursday to strengthen the hand of Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and his colleagues at today's monetary talks in Paris. The Big 10 finance ministers are meeting."

"You'll note it's mimographed," Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., subcommittee chairman, told newsmen at a hastily called news conference. "Printing takes about a week. The report reveals a steel fist under the velvet glove of free trade sentiment."

It recommends that International Monetary Fund (IMF) member nations impose "sanctions" against Germany and Japan if those two countries persist in refusing to revalue their currencies upward.

"Sanctions would take the form of discriminatory taxes against German and Japanese goods."

The Bretton Woods agreement, where the IMF was born, permits sanctions. But they've never been used against countries with big trade surpluses which refuse to raise the value of their money.

Grain deal said 'fumble'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The General Accounting Office (GAO) has charged that administrative fumbling within the Agriculture Department allowed the Soviet Union to buy an estimated 440 million bushels of U.S. grain at "bargain prices."

Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats told the Senate Agriculture Committee Thursday that his agency, which acts as an investigative arm of Congress, had found "no indication of law violations" in connection with the billion-dollar grain sale.

He said the chief flaw in Agriculture's performance was the weakness of its system for analyzing information on crop and trade conditions abroad.

He said the big losers in the deal were U.S. taxpayers and some farmers who sold their wheat before emerging knowledge of Russian sales drove U.S. market prices up.

While Staats was testifying, Agriculture Secretary Earl W. Butz announced in Chicago that the Justice Department has given government and private trade officials involved in the deal "a clean bill of health."

Gray called hatchetman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Columnist Jack Anderson described L. Patrick Gray today as a "political hatchetman" for President Nixon and said Senate confirmation of Gray as FBI director would set a precedent for making the post a "political plum."

Anderson, appearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee considering Gray's nomination, said, "It is immeasurably wrong to put a man in charge of the FBI whose prime interest is pleasing the President."

Front Gray's testimony over 15 hours in the past week, Anderson said that it was clear he was "not going to restrain the FBI, is not going to take

In your water heater
as in your home, insulation is an—

ENERGY SAVER

Only the electric water heater can be completely wrapped with insulation—top, bottom and all around. It gives the same benefit as does insulation for your home; it conserves heat. All of the heat goes into the water. And, like electric heat, flameless water heating requires no energy-wasting chimney. The heater heater has no match for efficiency.

Your electric appliances are designed to use energy efficiently. Your electric water heater, for example, will provide generously for all your family's hot water needs. Only you can see that it is used wisely.

Do your teen-agers stay under the shower until the hot water runs out? Consider the use of a timer to put a reasonable limit on hot water use.

Mail pace slow

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate hearings on the Postal Service ended with another horror story of poor performance—the case of a West Virginia resident who was dumped for a payment because his letter took 15 days to travel 50 feet.

Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., told the tale Thursday to the Senate Post Office Committee. He said a Nitro, W.Va., constituent mailed a payment to his local bank for a credit card statement on Dec. 31, dropping the letter in the post office mail slot 50 feet from a post office box used by the bank.

On Jan. 31, Randolph said, the constituent received a statement his account was past due. He later determined his check did not reach the bank until Jan. 15.

"It's difficult to understand how a letter takes 15 days to travel 50 feet," Randolph said. "This is three feet a day, slower than the proverbial snail."

Committee Chairman Gale McGee, D-Wyo., commented that perhaps mailmen should be called "snailmen."

Randolph's complaint was but one of many aired during two days of hearings by the committee. However, Harold F. Raught, mail processing director for the Postal Service, said postal officials believe they know where the problem for poor service lies and "we think that problem has been cleared up."

Postmaster General E. T. Klassen amplified on this by saying the service was aware of processing too much outgoing mail in some 80 regional distribution centers, instead of sending it directly to destination sectional centers.

Jerome senior named to post

JEROME — Steven James Keith, a senior in the Jerome High School, has been named to the U.S. Air Force Academy and will begin his military training July 1.

The young man was notified Friday by the office of U.S. Rep. James McClure, and was endorsed for the appointment by both Rep. McClure and U.S. Sen. Frank Church of Idaho.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Keith, Jerome. He has been on his school's honor roll since his second semester as a junior with a majority of A's that year and a straight A grade average as a senior. He received the outstanding student award in chemistry and German language class and is a member of a number of school clubs including the Letterman's club.

Keith has been active in sports, including track competition on the school, district and state levels. He was a Boy's State delegate last year and is listed in the Merit's Who's Who among outstanding high school students for 1972-73.

A resident of Jerome the past five years, he has worked part time in a Twin Falls grocery market while attending school.

Signature sold

LONDON (UPI) — One of the few known signatures of American billionaire Howard Hughes was sold to a Swedish collector for $184 Friday at a sale of Great Britain stamps and postal history. The signature was flown in mail on a special commemorative flight from New York to Le Bourget, France, in 1938.

Anti-inflation plan killed

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The European Common Market quietly killed an anti-inflation plan Friday that would have cut tariffs on consumer goods from America and other non-market nations by 20 per cent.

A Market spokesman said the plan died after the United States devalued the dollar by 10 per cent on Feb. 12. To add a tariff cut to this devaluation would give American exporters an outside competitive advantage on European markets, he said. Another proposal, to raise import quotas, also was shelved, the spokesman said. The plans were part of an anti-inflation package that market nations have been working on without result since October. Its purpose was to cut into European inflation, now running about 8 per cent per year.

The spokesman said the Market's executive commission, which had been drawing up the proposals, decided "officially" to postpone them indefinitely. In fact, he said, they "have been quietly buried."

The commission had hoped to lower the cost of imports by trimming tariffs on all consumer-good imports by 20 per cent.

"But this devaluation does more to fight inflation here than the tariff cut ever could," the spokesman said. "It makes all American goods 10 per cent cheaper here, whereas a 20 per cent cut in tariffs would only lower the price of the goods themselves by about 1 or 2 per cent." Individual governments have taken such isolated actions as raising interest rates or, as Belgium did this week, cutting back the pace of spending.

New laws

SEOUL (UPI) — Beginning Saturday, if you are a litterbug, a drunkard or a person who likes to wear see-through clothes and hippie-style haircuts, you face stringent penalties under South Korea's revised law on the punishment of public misdemeanors. Punishment might include 29 days in jail or a fine of up to $125. Other violations include spitting in public, spreading unfounded rumors, illegally teaching dancing and scalping theater or transportation tickets.

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — A regulation to prohibit topless and bottomless waitresses in bars and lounges will go into effect March 15. Alcoholic Beverage commissioner Virgil D. Joffrion said the rules also prevent the performance or simulation of sexual acts in filmed or live entertainment. He said most of the French Quarter strip clubs will not be affected by the regulations.

Cancer clinic slated for TF

TWIN FALLS — A new program to combat cancer of the head and neck among residents of Magic Valley will be initiated on April 4.

The Head, Neck and Oral Cancer Clinic, a unique new project sponsored by the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in cooperation with the Intermountain Regional Medical Program (IRMP), Salt Lake City, will provide opportunities for local physicians and dentists to review the latest techniques in the early detection and treatment of cancer of the head, neck and oral cavity.

More than 300 residents of Magic Valley will receive free cancer examinations at the special cancer screening clinic to be held at the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital on April 4.

An intensive two-hour refresher course for physicians and dentists will be held on the evening before the clinic, according to Dr. Robert Soderberg, Salt Lake City, director of the Head, Neck and Oral Cancer program.

Participants will review effective diagnostic and treatment techniques for cancer of the facial skin, lips, tongue, oral mucosa, pharynx, larynx, thyroid, and parathyroid. Emphasis will be placed upon thorough cancer detection procedures as part of routine patient examination," he said.

Dr. Soderberg also explained that early detection and treatment can markedly improve the survival rates for head, neck and oral cancer. Physicians and dentists working together to combat cancer in their communities must, however, rely upon their patients' ability to recognize possible disease symptoms and to seek immediate care.

examinations are brief and painless and could conceivably save the lives of some people who may unknowingly be affected with the disease.

Because of public response to the project in other Intermountain areas and in view of the limited amount of time, medical professionals and facilities, residents who are interested in being examined should complete the coupon below and return it to James Rosenbaum, administrator of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, 650 Addison Avenue West, by March 15.

A committee will review the coupons returned and residents selected will be contacted by telephone as to the time they should attend the clinic on April 4.

Any resident who does not attend the clinic and feels they have any signs or symptoms of the disease should consult with their personal physician as soon as possible for an examination.

The Head, Neck and Oral Cancer project of seminars and screening clinics will be conducted in 36 communities within the Intermountain Region over the next three years. The program is a single but important aspect of the IRMP's many educational and service projects designed to enhance the availability of high quality medical care throughout the Intermountain West.

Burley mayor outlines planned improvements

BURLEY — Mayor Garis Robertson prefaced the 63-page 1973 Burley budget report with an executive message that outlined past and planned improvements in the city.

Current conditions in Burley are indicative of continued improvement and many projects were implemented during the past year to upgrade services to residents, he said.

The projects included 15 miles of street improvements, a new well supplying 1,300 gallons-per-minute of culinary water, 17,000 feet of culinary water lines laid to supply new commercial and residential buildings, $107,000 in improvements to the city's support, new park facilities along the Snake River frontage, work begun to expand the nine-hole municipal golf course to 18 holes, and a shift in electrical system upgrading and expansion.

He said many of the projects concern continuing problems which will be dealt with accordingly.

The city's general economy is "very good" and will continue to improve "at a rate that is substantial without fear of a boom or bust potential," the mayor said.

A four to five per cent increase in the economy this budget year is "quite realistic," he added.

He listed several proposed improvements under this year's operating budget:

The electric department re-construction and new construction. One of the planned capital improvements calls for the purchase of a new two-ton truck and high-lift bucket for servicing high lines.

Resurfacing 15 miles of streets, some with overlay but most with seal coating. Replacement of several blocks of "very badly" deteriorated curb and gutter.

Completion of the 18-hole golf course and an administration building for the course. Completion of the River Front park and facilities. Each of the projects was made possible by federal matching funds.

Resurfacing of roads in the cemetery. A new well, pump and other equipment for sprinkler irrigation of the cemetery.

Completion of the south tie-down area at the airport and, if possible, surfacing of a taxi strip from the hangar area north to Runway 24.

Continuation by the water department of new line construction to additional customers. The purchase of land for a new well and reservoir for future growth. Removal of the sewage lagoon north of the river. Construction of disinfection holding tanks for outfall of the large lagoons, (funded by federal and state grants). Cleaning of sewers and sealing out of surface water.

Parks and recreation department purchase of new playground equipment and renovation of rest rooms and equipment.

Robertson said capital expenditures would be used for a new dog pound, an addition to the shop building for steam cleaning and painting of city equipment, three two-ton dump trucks for the street department, a one-half ton panel truck for the engineering department, a three-quarter ton truck for the water department, a two-ton garbage truck for the sanitation department, a hot mix patching unit for the street department, three police cars, and a new pump, motor and control panel for the cemetery.

North slopes avalanche prone in Blaine areas

BLAINE — North slopes remain avalanche prone in the Stanley Basin, Sawtooth Valley and upper Wood River areas, according to the week's snow condition report.

The report, released Friday by Frank Rowland, recreation assistant, Sawtooth National Recreation Area, provides an outlook for weekend conditions based on average snow and weather conditions during the past week.

Rowland said in elevations above 8,000 feet warmer days followed by cold nights have produced an about four inch snow layer, offering good skiing at higher elevations.

South and east slopes continue to be less hazardous and are recommended for ski touring parties. Rowland said danger from loose snow slides on south slopes had abated through natural release.

During the past week, he said the area did not experience periods of sustained winds, lessening development of an avalanche hazard from that source.

Cross-country skiing was listed as excellent. However, Rowland said, an about eight inch depth layer continues and with the lack of a snow base tends to make snowmobiles bog down in the snow.

The recreation assistant said changing weather conditions could alter the avalanche potential and recreationalists should check with US Forest Service officials before entering the back country to obtain an updated forecast.

Checkup cards

HOLLISTER — Cards for cancer checkups were distributed to members of Hollister Chapter No. 47, Order of Eastern Star, at a meeting Thursday evening.

Members donated articles to the lodge in a kitchen shower. A resolution was passed to present Mable Worster a 50-year membership pin and certificate. Candies signifying completion of the required visit to other chapters were burned by several members.

Proceedings of the 1972 Grand Chapter meeting were reviewed by the worthy matron. Installation was set for 8 p.m. May 5.

Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Standley and Mr. and Mrs. Kenny Black.

Profits will rise

NEW YORK (UPI) — Corporate profits in 1973 probably will rise about 12 per cent over last year before taxes, economists of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. said today.

The forecast estimated gross corporate profit for the year at $63.1 billion, up from $56.2 billion in 1972.

However, this big gain will be about $1 billion less than it might have been without the Phase III profit margin ceilings, the study indicated.

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Polksinger Joan Baez said Thursday that one of the nicest "loves of my life" was a lesbian affair that occurred 11 years ago.

"It was something that happened when I was 21, and not since then," the 32-year-old entertainer said. "I'm more male oriented now."

Miss Baez, who has a 3-year-old son and is separated from her husband, anti-war leader David Harris, said she was bisexual in an interview published in the Daily California.

Later, she told reporters at her home on the San Francisco peninsula that she wasn't sure if she used the correct term, or if the disclosure should have been made. "But I know it's important to a lot of people."

Safety course taught

HAILEY—About 120 Wood River Junior High School seventh graders have completed a three hour course on hunter safety.

Conducted by the State Fish and Game Department, the program is offered annually to all seventh graders on a state-wide basis.

The course at Wood River was split into two sessions, with Kirk Elgerhard, Hailey district conservation officer, instructing the first day and district officers, Lee Frost, Carey, and Lynn Merrill, Fairfield, instructing the second day.

Stressing fire arm safety and safe gun handling, the course incorporated lectures as well as film and slide presentations.

Course topics included game animal, bird and predatory animal identification; hunting laws and regulations; and outdoor survival. Students were allowed to handle demonstration firearms, representing a variety of guns available on the market, including bolt, pump, semi-automatic actions and revolvers.

The course will be followed up this spring with voluntary target practice session in which each student will shoot about 40 rounds with a 22 target rifle.

Food costs protested

By United Press International
When the regulars at the Northwood Inn in Drummond Island, Mich., started to grumble about the 10-cent rise in the price of hamburgers, proprietor Sharon Weiler decided to protest the spiraling food costs.

Next week the inn will serve sandwiches of egg, grilled cheese and fish caught from nearby lakes; but no meat.

"We've also concocted a supermarket on-eye without the corned beef," she said.

Mrs. Weiler's reaction was similar to many across the country. In response to the rising cost of food prices—it was announced in Washington Thursday they went up again in February, there has been a growing movement to try to do something about it.

The protest took two major forms, both designed to drive down the price of food and meat by decreasing the demand. The first included boycotts of food markets; the other, "meatless days," where by consumers will not buy meat one day a week.

The Rhode Island Senate this week passed a resolution asking the governor to proclaim one day a week during April a meatless day.

"By refusing to purchase highly inflated items such as meat, by securing their protein from less costly foods and by joining disgruntled citizens throughout the country, Rhode Island consumers can make their protest more effectively heard and felt by proclaiming meatless day," the resolution said. Most of the protest came from private, consumer-organized organizations such as St. Louis' Housewives Elect Lower Prices (HELPL), Alberta Slavin, head of the group, says she has gotten good responses and the newspapers have helped out by printing meatless recipes in their food columns.

TF sheriff, police differ over training

By GEORGE WILLY

Times-News Staff Writer

TWIN FALLS—Sheriff Paul Corder and Chief of Police Frank Barnett have taken opposing stands on a mandatory police training bill passed by the Idaho legislature.

Barnett has been on record for some time as favoring mandatory training and certification for law enforcement officers which he says will result in greater professionalism.

Corder, while stating that he is in favor of all available training for officers, objects to the mandatory aspects of the new legislation. He says training of officers should be done at the discretion of each sheriff or chief of police.

The legislation, which originated in and was passed by the state senate earlier, cleared the house by a vote of 42-6 Tuesday night.

The bill requires that "From and after Jan. 1, 1974, any law enforcement personnel employed by the State of Idaho or any political subdivision thereof shall be certified by the Police Officers Standards and Training Academy within one year after first being employed." The bill will not become law until signed by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus.

Basically, the legislation will require that newly-employed law enforcement officers throughout the state, including fish-and-game officers and brand inspectors as well as state, county and city policemen, attend a month-long training session at the Police Academy in Pocatello and receive a basic certificate following their first year of employment.

However, officers hired after July 1, 1970, will also be required to attend the academy if they do not qualify for certification under alternate procedures.

According to Larry Platt, director of the academy, rules initiated by the Law Enforcement Planning Commission require the following procedures for certification:

A man hired prior to July 1, 1970, must simply pass the academy's exam. He does not have to attend the academy.

An officer hired after July 1, 1970, must attend the academy and pass the exam or be a graduate of one of three vocational programs in Idaho and complete a year of service and then pass the academy exam. Any Idaho officer previously certified in another state must pass the exam only.

All officers hired after Jan. 1, 1974, who have not been previously certified in another state must attend the academy.

Platt said it is the intention of the planning commission to have all officers in Idaho certified by Jan. 1, 1975.

Barnett said Thursday all of his men have gone through the academy and only two are completing a year of service before certification. Barnett said none of his men will be affected by the mandatory legislation. He noted that certification is not required for radio operators, meter men or secretarial employees.

Corder said as many as five of his 14 deputies may have to be recertified or recertified under the new legislation, although only two of them may be asked to attend the academy in Pocatello. Corder said he hopes the deputies will be allowed only to take the exam. He said he thought all his men could pass the exam now.

To a degree, Corder's objection to the mandatory legislation is a matter of local versus state control.

"I believe in absolute local control of local government," Corder said. "I don't believe a guy in Boise can tell me how to run my office and I wouldn't try to tell him how to run his. Somebody in Boise doesn't know the needs of the people here."

Corder also objects to sending his men to Pocatello for a month. He favors a "roving" police academy which would move from location to location throughout the state. He said he thinks the idea of bringing instructors to students rather than sending the students to the instructor is feasible.

"There's really no limit to how much training an officer should have," Corder said. "I think you should have all you can get for your officers, but I can't hire three men so I can send two or three men to school."

Corder would like to see the academy moved, at least part of the time, to the College of Southern Idaho. This, he said, would allow him to work his men full or half shift while in school.

Corder said he had talked to CSI president James L. Taylor, who assured him the facilities of the college would be made available whenever a program could be set up.

"I'm sure we could have a two week school or a four week school," Corder said. "I'm in favor of two weeks, then a break, then two weeks later."

Corder made it clear he was not criticizing the present academy. "I think they've done a tremendous job," Corder also made it clear that he supported special training programs.

"Every school that's in this area I got men to," he said, noting that five of his officers attended a one-day homicide investigation class in Hailey Thursday.

"Anything you can learn to help a human being is a must in this kind of work, because you never know what tomorrow will bring."

Corder also said he believes procedures he now uses to train his men are fully as adequate as academy training. He said all new officers begin by working on the desk until they are thoroughly familiar with the operations of the sheriff's office.

The deputies then follow a four-step training schedule which gradually decreases their time on the desk and increases their time in the patrol car, until after about three years they are working full-time patrol.

Barnett takes issue with Corder's proposals on several grounds.

First, he is not in favor of a roving academy. "The cost would be prohibitive if they held the school in different parts of the state."

Barnett said only a few men in any given area could attend the academy. He said he did not think it was sensible to transport 17 to 18 instructors and all necessary materials to train a handful of men at a time.

"I don't care where the school is held," Barnett said. He has no objection to moving the academy to Twin Falls, he said, "but I do think for this basic school it should be held in one location in the state."

Barnett said he could think of several reasons why the facilities presently at Idaho State University were more suitable than those at CSI. "We don't have housing in conjunction with the college here.

We don't have an area for a pursuit driving course. We do not have an adequate firearms range."

Barnett also said in his opinion it would be impossible for a man to attend the academy and perform any of his regular duties in the same day. He said the school ran six days a week, 10 hours a day, leaving no time for regular work.

Barnett said federal funds are available under the Omnibus Crime Control Act to provide replacement's during the time officers are attending school. The Idaho State Police have also offered to provide a man, where needed in small departments, he said.

Barnett said reimbursement for overtime pay is available under the omnibus bill to provide shift replacements for officers in basic training. He admitted that it might be more difficult for smaller departments to meet the basic training requirements. He said one officer out of his 30-man force was assigned basically to the replacement of men in any sort of training.

Barnett said one reason he favored mandatory training was that "in addition to a man having proper training, an officer will never be a true professional until mandatory standards and requirements are set for the profession."

Barnett said he did not think mandatory requirements would work a severe hardship on any department.

Platt said he had no authority to move the school to Twin Falls or any other location in the state. He said if the academy were moved at the direction of the Post Council, he would still favor a live-in situation, even for officers local to the area.

"Even a Pocatello officer is required to live in," Platt said of the present academy. He said not only was support an important part of the intensive study program, but an ever greater advantage was the chance to get to know officers from throughout the state.

Humor lightened prisoner routine

The North Vietnamese are somewhat like children," he said. "They could not keep things from us." He said they learned of changes in America primarily through newly captured prisoners. The most noticeable change in his estimation is "the morality of the people in general." He said some of the current movies offend his morality.

The prisoners also learned of the long hair and wide ties that had become fashionable, he said. "I don't have time to put my hair up at night," was his only comment.

Chesley said his future plans call for either attending Arizona State University and working toward a master's degree in history, political science or business administration or becoming an instructor pilot at Williams Air Force Base, Mesa, Ariz.

He said he wants to go to Arizona because of its dry, warm climate. "After I got sick (in North Vietnam), the cold really went through me, and I want to go someplace where it is warm all the time."

At his morning press conference, Chesley said the camaraderie established between prisoners in North Vietnam will not be abandoned. He said the POWs who have returned are already planning annual reunions. The first one has been tentatively set for August of 1974 at Las Vegas, Nev. Plans also call for annual yearbooks and newsletters, he said.

Chesley "publically" announced that his wife had divorced him.

"I held grudges toward her. You do not know what she lived through," he said. His marriage was dissolved two years ago during his captivity. He said he doesn't intend to try to gain custody of his two children, Debbie, 11, and Donnie, 9.

He would not comment on the effect that anti-war groups had on the morale of the prisoners. "Most of us came to the conclusion that we were fighting over there to allow people, such as the anti-war groups, to exercise their freedoms," he said.

The prisoners held church services every Sunday, he said. The group of men would kneel in prayer and recite the 23rd Psalm and the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag.

Parents and relatives of army men who were killed in the war were seated in the gymnasium next to the Chesleys and the speakers. Their names and the names of their men who were killed were read to the audience.

A highlight of the program came when Santa Claus emerged from the gymnasium wings to give Chesley a robust hug and shake hands with the many children.

Larry had said that he wanted a Christmas and Thanksgiving celebration "wrapped up together" when he got home. Santa took the speakers' podium and introduced Captain Chesley as "the greatest gift" he had ever given.

Burley welcomes Chesley

National Guard units from Burley, Twin Falls, Jerome and Rupert marched along with the Twin Falls Army Reserve.

Entries from local businesses were numerous. At least two of the entries constructed trampolines on trucks and contained children "jumping for joy" at Chesley's return.

Not all of the jumpers were children. Cassia County commissioner Weldon Beck was one enthusiastic exception.

Enthusiasm was the heart of the parade. None of the entries was elaborate. One of the vehicles was crammed with children who bombarded the reviewing stand with candy kisses for Captain Chesley.

A young boy on a unicycle caught the eye of many of the spectators.

High-stepping young girls, some no more than four or five years old with flowing ribbons in their hair stopped at the platform to serenade Chesley. Antique car owners had field day.

The parade lasted approximately 45 minutes. Parade officials marveled at the large turnout for the event.

Organizer Mike Ecker said the event was probably the largest that Burley had ever seen. Mindoka parade chairman W. F. (Bill) Whitton said the parade was probably the largest of its kind (for returning POW) in the nation.

The parade route cleared quickly after the last entry had passed. Most headed for the Burley High School gymnasium to get a good seat for the formal ceremonies there at 3:30 p.m.

Chesley welcomed

BURLEY — children; above, were an important part of the huge parade welcoming returning prisoner of war Capt. Larry Chesley Saturday. An estimated 2,000 persons marched in the parade while another 30,000 watched. At left, Santa Claus paid a surprise visit to Chesley in response to his request that he celebrate Christmas and Thanksgiving all at once at his homecoming. Santa said the returning Chesley was the "greatest gift." (TEN photos by David Horsman)

Gooding facilities funded

BOISE — Gooding's two state institutions have received funding from the state legislature.

Friday the House approved maintenance funds of $59,600 for the vacant tuberculosis hospital for next year and Thursday the same body gave its unanimous approval to a $62,000 general fund appropriations for the State School for the Deaf and Blind.

This school appropriation is $88,000 more than Gov. Cecil Andrus' recommendation and $124,000 more than last year's budget. The vote was 65-0. It now moves to the senate for consideration.

The vote on the maintenance funding for the vacant hospital was 59-1 and the measure now goes to the governor for his consideration. It passed the senate earlier in the session.

The money will go to the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services which assumed control of the building as the result of legislation which passed earlier in the session.

Hearings set

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley residents will have opportunity to "talk back" to the Idaho Water Resource Board this week.

Official hearings are slated for Monday afternoon and evening in the Idaho Power auditorium in Twin Falls and Tuesday at Burley on the preliminary report of the interim state water plan.

Marshall Edson, information officer for the board, will conduct the hearings. Persons can either present written statements or give them orally and they will be taped. The Twin Falls hearings will be from 2 to 5 and from 7 to 10 p.m.

These public hearings follow a series of information meeting held.

These public hearings follow a series of information meetings held throughout the state earlier this year to explain the preliminary study.

Now residents are asked to present their views which will be taken into consideration and help shape the final version of the official state water plan. The plan to be developed in 1975 is expected to be adopted by the state legislature in 1976.

Ketchum slates meeting series

KETCHUM — A series of Ketchum Community Project meetings is scheduled this week and next.

With each session to cover a specific topic, the meetings are designed to propose designed to propose alternatives toward development of a comprehensive Ketchum city plan and policy. All meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the project headquarters in the second floor of the Colonnade.

Tuesday, U.S. Forest Service slides on recreation will be shown.

On Wednesday, State Highway Department officials will be present to discuss proposed alignments for U.S. Highway 93, transportation and circulation. Alternate forms of transportation will also be covered, including private transportation, railroad and bus services.

Thursday's meeting will be on "population and density" alternatives.

Other sessions will include the following: March 20, a pictorial and lecture history of the area; March 21, zoning and procedures and March 22 economics and revenue.

The public is invited to attend and participate in any or all the sessions.

Escape charged

TWIN FALLS — An 18-year-old Twin Falls youth remained in custody at the county jail Saturday on charges of escape and resisting arrest.

James Cromer, originally arrested on a charge of being drunk in public after an Idaho State police officer spotted him slumped over the wheel of his car with the horn going about 3 a.m., was charged with escape and resisting arrest after he broke and ran from the night shift sheriff's deputy during the booking process.

The deputy said Cromer was apprehended by Twin Falls police officers as he was running across the Court House parking lot. Later, the deputy said, Cromer became "real violent" and had to be subdued by physical force.

School bond bill okayed

BOISE — A bill that would increase bonding capacity of school districts from 15 to 20 per cent of assessed valuation has won Senate approval and is headed for the governor's office. Floor sponsor E. H. Tacke, D-Cottonwood, said Friday the measure is needed by several districts to assure sufficient capacity for bond issues.

Bellevue council okays new zoning ordinance

By TERRY CAMPBELL, Times-News writer

BELLEVUE — Two years of work culminated in an unanimous vote of adoption for the new city planning and zoning ordinance during a special meeting of the Bellevue City Council Thursday night.

Membership of the five-man planning and zoning commission will be determined during the next regular council meeting in April.

In other action, the council unanimously adopted an ordinance controlling the accumulation of junk, debris and wrecked automobiles on city streets, alleys and right-of-ways.

The ordinance provides that if such material is not removed within 15 days after notification, the city will remove it and a lien will be placed against the owner's property or that a civil suit may be initiated by the city. Following the special meeting, a discussion period was conducted.

Bob Houston of Elliotts Inc., Burley, presented figures on the city's proposed purchase of a new backhoe.

Bill Showalter said he had agreed to allow the city to install a fire phone at his business, Bill's Chevron.

The council is seeking volunteer firemen, a job which would entail a two-hour fire drill a month. Fire training schools will also be available in Halley, beginning in April.

The council decided to order street signs for Main Street, designating cross streets to aid in locating fires.

Atteman Duke Martin said he had received negative comments on Mayor James Pigg's proposal to hire a full-time city administrator, combining clerk, water collection and librarian duties presently handled by several employees on a part-time basis.

Martin said the city would "be setting a very poor precedent" by abolishing one of the jobs and recommended that if a city budget is to be established that the city initially hire an accountant.

Mayor Pigg said, through his proposal, city business could be consolidated, promoting better management of the city's affairs. He said presently city business is being conducted in "too haphazard" a manner, from four separate houses instead of one office.

Alderman John Pascoe said, in consideration of the proposal for purchase of a new backhoe, that the city first determine how much present use it has for a backhoe and what benefits the city would accrue from the purchase.

Senate balks at court fund bid

By DAVID ESPO, Times-News writer

BOISE — The Senate Saturday held up final action on a supplemental appropriations for the state judiciary for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee has recommended a supplemental of $46,500 for the court system, but Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Charles Donaldson said in a letter this week if the legislature didn't provide about $40,000 more

District Court would be curtailed in 28 counties across the state. The Senate considered the $46,500 supplemental during floor debate Saturday, but became embroiled in the dispute over whether to allow for the extra money asked by Donaldson and took no final action.

(Related story, p. 8)

Sen. John Evans, D-Malad, minority leader, told the Senate that "if the Supreme Court needs another $40,000 the legislature should appropriate it. If you're going to go back and tell your people there's not going to be any court in the countryside, I think that's wrong."

But Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, co-chairman of the Joint committee, said the legislature "has already appropriated the money once." The question was in the effect of the governor's ordered 1.9 per cent general fund spending holdback, which is freezing about $39,000 appropriated to the courts for the current year.

Sen. Edith Miller Klein, R-Boise, an attorney in private life, said that most of the court's expenses and costs were set by law. "The court really doesn't have any power to change them," she told the Senate, and urged them to add what she referred to as a "piddling amount" to the supplemental appropriations.

Sen. Robert Saxvik, D-Burley, agreed, and said "I think we've spanked the hands of the Supreme Court enough on this. I think they've got the message."

The letter from Donaldson to the committee threatened a termination of District Court services in 28 counties beginning April if the money isn't forthcoming. Included were Cassia, Blaine, Lincoln, Gooding and Jerome. In addition, he said, Supreme Court spring terms in four cities, including Twin Falls, would be canceled because of the travel cutback authorization that would be needed.

The court had asked for supplemental appropriations of nearly $90,000. The committee approved and sent to the legislature a supplemental appropriations bill calling for $46,500.

According to a letter from High and Rep. William Roberts, R-Ruhl, the co-chairmen of the committee, requests for $38,800 that the court lost through the spending holdback and $9,000 requested for a cited increase in the workload and employer-related costs, were denied.

How's that?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ambrose Bierce, who roamed the earth between 1842 and 1914 or thereabouts, wasn't known for saying sweet things. His remarks, in fact, have been described as acidic. Among the acidic words credited to him are the following: a definition of marriage:

"Marriage: a community consisting of a master, a mistress, and two slaves, making in all, two."

Wyatt, Trenkle named to coach all-star squads

Neal Wyatt, who led his Oakley Hornets to the class A-4 state championship following an 18-2 season, and first-year coach Fred Trenkle of Wood River, whose Wolverines surprised with a 14-6 mark; will handle the coaching chores for the second annual Magic Valley all-star basketball game.

The game, pitting the top 10 from each side of Magic Valley, is slated for 8 p.m. Friday at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium. For the second year all proceeds will go to the Idaho Easter Seals Society.

Sanctioned by the Fourth District of the Idaho Interscholastic Activities Association, the game drew a turn-away crowd last year.

The players this year, nominated by members of the Fourth District Coaches Association, include: east-Craig Hepworth, 6-7 Millico center; Val Christensen, 5-8 Minico guard; Tracy Nielsen, 6-8 Burley center; Mike Sagers, 6-4 Burley forward; Don Bedke, 6-9 Oakley guard; Mike Sorenson, 6-2 Shoshone guard; Steve Bowers, 6-2 Richfield forward; Rick Nelson, 6-3 Kimberly forward; Les Reitz, 6-4 Valley center; and Rick DeGuey, 5-11

Murtaugh guard-forward. The west will reply with Bob Durham, 6-3 Twin Falls forward; Charlie Browne, 6-3 Twin Falls forward; Lynn Russo, 5-9 Castelford guard; Jim Hurst, 5-8 Wood River guard; Ray Hansen, 6-3 Glenn Perry center; Doyle Rodgers, 6-1 Gooding forward-guard; Logan Parker, 5-8 Jerome guard; Al Stevenson, 5-11 Wendell guard; Roger Clabb, 6-2 Jerome forward; and Matt Croner, 6-4 Tamaia County center.

Under conditions established by the sanctioning group, none of the players has been notified of his selection. The guidelines preclude any announcement prior to windup of the state basketball tournament, which concluded last night.

Coch Trenkle has set his first practice for 4:30 p.m. Monday at the Gooding high school gymnasium while Coach Wyatt will hold his first get-together at 4 p.m. Monday at the Burley gymnasium. Players are asked to bring their team playing uniforms for picture taking. The east end will wear dark uniforms and the west will wear white.

Other practices and procedures will be announced by the coaches during the first get together.

Long Beach, Ariz. State win in western regional LOGAN, Utah (UPI)—Arizona State, led by a trio of driving guards, powered its way past Oklahoma City 103-78 to win the second game in the NCAA western regional quarter-finals here Saturday.

Third-ranked Long Beach State recovered in the second half to crush Weber State 88-75 in the first game.

ASU's starters Mike Contreras and Jim Owens and reserve Rudy White led the way on driving lay-ins and ball-hawking defense to overcome 31 points by OCU's Ozell Edwards.

Contreras was high man for the Sun Devils with 21 points, White had 19 and Owens added 16 as ASU dominated the second half.

The Chiefs stayed close in the first 20 minutes trailing 46-43 at intermission but Arizona State field OCU without a basket for four minutes moving ahead 60-36. The Chiefs managed only three free throws in the opening minutes of the second half.

Edwards, the nation's eighth leading scorer, brought the Chiefs back to eight points down, 67-59, as he hit 21 of his game-high points in the second half.

But Arizona State's shuffling guards kept the pressure on OCU with a man-to-man full court press.

The other half of OCU's dynamic scoring duo, Marvin Rich, managed only 16 points before fouling out with 6:29 left in the game. Rich is ranked 14th nationally in scoring with a 24-point average.

All-America guard Ed Ratleff and Leonard Gray powered the tier attack from a five-point halftime deficit. Both Ratleff and Gray had 25 points.

Weber State, led by two at the half, 44-44, and moved out to a five-point lead midway in the second half. But then Gray and 6-11 center Nate Stephens combined for 16 straight points to the 49ers as they reversed the margin to 70-45 for Long Beach with six minutes left.

Weber State fell behind early in the game but rallied to tie the score 24-24 with 4:38 left before intermission. Guard Brady Small led the Wildcat attack with 12 points in the first half and put Weber ahead at intermission on a lay-in with two seconds to go.

But the Wildcats' dream of advancing to the NCAA semifinals faded behind the Long Beach final drive. Joining Ratleff and Gray in the scoring attack were 9er "Super-sub" Kaseue Pondexter and Stephens, both with 12 points.

Small was high for Weber with 18 points but only six came in the second half. Steve Fleming added 16 points to the Wildcat attack.

The Wildcats switched to a full-court, man-to-man defense to a tight zone late in the first half and appeared in control before the 49ers found the key to Weber's defense.

Long Beach State will play the University of San Francisco March 16 in Los Angeles in the semifinals.

CSI leaves for national tourney today

Eagles meet Mercer in Tuesday opener

If we play like we did in regionals, we could do very well.

With that statement, Coach Jerry Hale and his College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles will go after honors this week in Hutchinson, Kansas, the traditional home of the national junior college basketball tournament.

The Golden Eagles will play at 1:45 p.m. Tuesday against 10th-ranked Mercer County JC of Trenton, N. J. The Eagles wound up sixth in the final poll while Vincennes, Ind., was second. Those were the only three of the top ten who survived the regional playoffs.

Although the Eagles will carry a 29-3 record into the 16-team tournament, Coach Hale hasn't always been too sure what to expect. But he was pleased with his charges' victory in the regionals.

"The boys put tremendous defensive pressure on both the teams we played," said Coach Hale. "We went up there expecting to meet North Idaho in the finals, but after they lost Willis to a knee injury the Friday before it started, they couldn't beat Linn-Benton (Ore.). But the way our boys played, I really doubt that a healthy North Idaho could have beaten us."

Coach Hale said the same kind of effort would be needed in every game played at Hutchinson for the Eagles to survive.

It would appear Mercer County will have a similar format to CSI's. The New Jersey team relies on a wealth of small, quick guards — which indicates full court pressure and a running game. Inside, they aren't particularly tall, one 6-8 and the next tallest 6-4. But they run one-two in scoring and rebounding.

"I haven't been able to learn much about Mercer yet — at least what they like to do offensively and defensively. But I've talked to some people who just keep saying they're a backdoor ball club. I hope to have some specifics by the time we have to play them."

Coach Hale believes CSI is in a pretty good bracket although it's a national tournament you can't overlook anyone.

From their first game, CSI will advance against either Ulster County of New York or Plattes JC of Nebraska. Plattes is considered the toughest of those two since they came through the rougher regional tournament. They defeated Casper, Wyo., in the finals and Casper was rated in the top five.

In the other half of the upper bracket are Three River, Mo.; Dalton, Ga.; defending champion Vincennes, Ind., and the Texas representative, to be decided in a playoff Saturday night.

"We know Vincennes is an excellent ball club because they are returning three of the five starters from last year's championship team," Coach Hale says. "They have great speed and jumping ability. I'm also told the Texas team will be outstanding."

Away from CSI in the lower bracket are Dixie College, Utah; Olney Central, Ill.; Bacone, Okla.; Paducah, Ky.; Hutchinson, Kans.; Burlington, Ia.; Greenville, S. C., and Howard, Fla.

"There are some fine teams in that group. Many people believe that Hutchinson has the best junior college material in the nation this year. And they'll be playing at home in front of 6,000 fans," Coach Hale points out.

The CSI schedule should remain a winner, would run 1:45 p.m. Tuesday, 7:45 p.m. Wednesday, 7 p.m. Friday and 8:45 p.m. Saturday. The other way, CSI would play its second game at 6 p.m. Wednesday, noon Friday and 1 p.m. Saturday.

Miss Fouts, Eaton grab rifle honors

Doug Eaton of Boise and Karen Fouts of Twin Falls took top honors in the sub-junior competition of the southern division of the Idaho state junior gallery rifle championships Saturday.

Eaton won aggregate honors as he won the prone match and placed second in the sitting competition. Darrel Hinz, Caldwell, was second overall with a second place in the prone sharpshooter competition and the winner of the sitting shooting.

Miss Fouts was first marksman and third prone marksman in winning the high girl trophy.

David Wilkinson, Pocatello, second in prone and third sitting sharpshooter, won the sharpshooter aggregate title. Tony Grindstaff was first in both prone and sitting in taking the pro marksman title, and Julia Fouts, Twin Falls, was the top marksman.

The junior squads will take over at the Twin Falls rifle and pistol club facilities at 8 a.m. Sunday. The scores posted here will be compared to those shot in the Northern Division at Lewiston, and the state champions will be crowned on that basis.

Mays shows up after absence

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Willie Mays, missing mysteriously for two days from the New York Mets' training camp, turned up at 5 p.m. Saturday with a logical explanation.

Mays left St. Petersburg Thursday night and flew back to his home in Atherton, Calif., where he said his wife was ill.

Shooting winners

Indoor medley record helps Manhattan to first U.S. title

DETROIT (UPI) — A world indoor record in the distance medley relay Saturday sped Manhattan to its first national title ever, the team championship of the ninth annual NCAA Indoor Track and Field meet.

Rod Milburn of Southern University, his eye and trauma goggles turned toward a career as a professional football flanker, clocked four straight record-equalling 6.9s in winning the 60-yard high hurdles.

Dave Whittle, denied the two mile crown Friday night by Manhattan's Mike Keogh, returned to take the mile in 4:04.4 to bring the indoor track championships to a close.

John Lovett led off Manhattan's record effort with a 1:58.2 half mile and Ray Johnson hit a :50.4 quarter mile. It took Joe Savage just 2:55.9 to do three quarters of a mile and Tony Colon anchored with a 4:04.3 mile.

The new 11-lap board track record was eight tenths of a second under the original standard posted by Kansas State in 1967 and equaled by Villanova two years ago.

The Jaspers scored 18 points to beat out Kansas, Kent State and Texas-El Paso, each of whom had 12.

Kenneth McBryde did his part for Manhattan by finishing third in Friday's triple jump and Manhattan's other points came from Clifford Bruce's third place finish in the 1,000-yard run.

"A national team championship just doesn't compare to an individual effort," coach Fred Dwyer of Manhattan said. "This is a well deserved award for our whole team. The kids went out and did everything they were supposed to and didn't fold."

Chris Dunn of Colgate joined Barry McIlhenny of Middle Tennessee State, who took the triple jump, as the only ones among seven champions to successfully defend their titles.

Dunn went seven feet, two inches in the high jump.

Gerald Tinker of Kent State won the 60-yard dash in six seconds flat, a tenth of a second over what he had done in a preliminary heat. Tinker, Milburn, Whittle and long jump winner Randy Williams of Southern California were all Olympic gold medal winners performing in the meet.

Ken Popejoy of Michigan State, the defending titlist, finished a well beaten fifth to Whittle in the mile. Adelphi, winner of two straight mile relay titles, wound up second behind Seton Hall this year. Seton Hall was timed in 3:17.0.

Aberdeen topples Grangeville in A-2

Bear Lake tops Gooding 59-41

BOISE (UPI) — The Aberdeen Tigers captured the state A-2 basketball crown Saturday night after posting a runaway 74-40 victory over the Grangeville Bulldogs in Boise.

The Shelley Russets captured third place in the tourney for 1973 with a 60-54 win over the Wallace Miners, and the Bear Lake Bears won the consolation championship for fifth place with an easy 59-41 win over the Gooding Senators.

In the final game, 6-6 center Steve Hayes set a blistering single-game scoring record for Aberdeen with 43 points. Tlgh man for Grangeville was Terry Baker with 10.

Grangeville led only once in the game, early in the first period 7-0, and from there on it was all Aberdeen. Hayes couldn't be stopped.

He scored 28 points in the first half and 15 in the second. No other Tiger scored in double figures.

Grangeville stayed relatively close to Aberdeen in the first half, trailing only 10-11 after the first quarter. But near the end of the second quarter they dropped in six straight field goals to propel Aberdeen to a 38-23 halftime lead.

Aberdeen was 30-42 from the field and a near 100 per cent at the charity stripe 14-15.

Grangeville was 15-63 from the field and 10-17 from the free throws line.

In the tight third, Wallace led 52-49 with two minutes left in the game but six straight points by junior guard Wally Foster propelled the tigers to a 59-52 lead with 50 seconds left in the game.

Wallace commanded the game until the last 90 seconds.

In an attempt to catch up, Wallace fouled two different Shelley players who converted free throws to put the game out of reach.

Wallace's Mike Crnkovich scored 20 points and Steve Posnik added 11 for the Miners who led at every quarter break except the one that counted.

At one point, Wallace led by 10 points.

Steve Cannariato paced Shelley with 15 points. Joe Gellings scored 14 and Foster tallied 12.

Bear Lake led the entire game in the consolation contest and made the contest a runaway in the last few minutes Bear Lake had three players in double figures led by Mark Penrose with 20, Earl Burdick with 14 and Ken Parks with 13.

For Gooding, Ron Wilde scored 11, Gene Larson 10 and Larry Patterson 10.

Friars defeat St. Joseph's

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ernie DiGregorio scored 25 of his game-high 31 points in the second half Saturday night to lead sixth-ranked Providence to an 89-76 victory over St. Joseph's (Pa.) in an opening-round game of the NCAA Eastern Regional basketball playoffs.

The victory carried Providence into an Eastern semifinal matchup against Penn next Thursday night at Charlotte, N.C. Penn beat St. John's of New York 62-61 in their first round game Saturday night.

A five-point spurt by DiGregorio with five minutes gone in the second half widened the Providence lead from five points to 10 at 49-39 and St. Joseph's could not get no closer than seven, 81-74, the rest of the game.

DiGregorio, the Friars' lone papper, was held to six points the first half but rallied to more than surpass his season average of 24.4 before a batch of National Basketball Association scouts that included Coach Larry Costello of Milwaukee, General Manager Dick Auerbach of Boston and Dick McGuire of the New York Knicks.

MR. FARMER... WHY ARE YOU THINKING SPRINKLERS??

that's easy! money

pipe won't welcome weeds

Keeping open ditches from becoming weed nurseries presents problems. Sure, you can do it. Fairly well, at least.

But it takes time and costs money. You save both with a sprinkler system using pipe for both mains and laterals.

Syracuse outlasts Furman

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Syracuse held off a desperate Furman rally Saturday night for an 83-82 victory to advance into the NCAA Eastern Regionals Thursday at Charlotte.

Syracuse opened a 10-point lead midway through the second half, but had to struggle in the last stages with the Paladins, who came within three points four times in the last two minutes.

Two free throws by Jim Lee with 29 seconds left proved to be the winning difference. The two charity tosses put the Orangemen in front 83-78, but Furman roared right back to make it 83-80 with 23 seconds remaining. The losers scored again as time ran out.

Mike Lee led the winners with 22 points and teammate Dennis Davall chipped in 18. The losers were led by Roy Simpson with 16.

The victory was the 10th straight for Syracuse, as the Orange boosted its season mark to 23-4. The Paladins ended their season at 20-9.

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Hawks roared back from a 12 point deficit at the start of the fourth period Saturday night to defeat the Golden State Warriors, 117-113, for their sixth win in a row.

Lou Hudson, leading the Hawks attack with 27 points, delivered the final punch with two free throws in the last seconds. Herm Gilliam added 24 points for Atlanta and Pete Maravich had 21.

The Sonics built up an 81-68 margin after three periods and Philadelphia never got closer than eight points in the final quarter.

Seattle's superiority on the boards proved decisive as the Sonics pulled down 27 offensive rebounds.

Ohio State tops Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Guard Allan Horniak scored 24 points in leading Ohio State to a season-ending 102-87 Big Ten victory over Michigan Saturday.

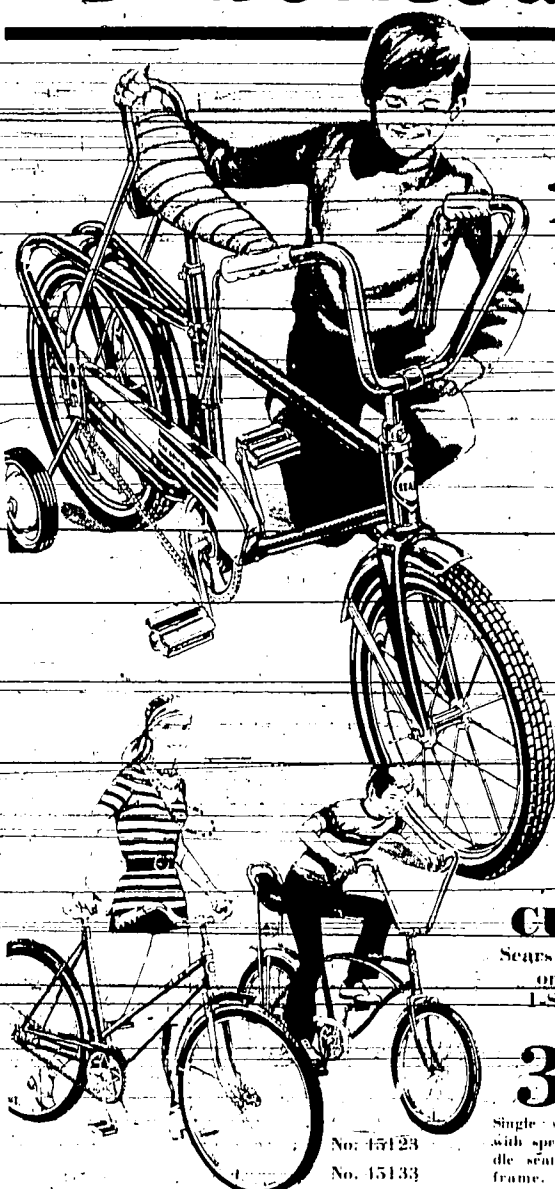

The Buckeyes jumped off to a quick 10-point lead in the first five minutes of the game, 21-11. With the exception of a 37-37 tie in the half, Ohio State was in control of the contest.

1972 accidents kill 117,000

NEW YORK, N. Y. — About 117,000 Americans died last year as a result of accidents, approximately 2,000 more than the previous year.

According to estimates by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. Statistical Bureau, the provisional mortality rate from accidents in 1972 was 56.2 deaths per 100,000 population, a rise from the 55.3 mortality rate for the preceding year.

The increase in the accidental death toll was, in large part, attributed to an increase in motor vehicle fatalities by about 1,000, to a record high of 56,500.

However, due to an increase in the volume of automobile travel, the fatality rate per 100 million vehicle miles traveled was 4.7 a record low.

Other public accidents increased by about 500 over the 1971 figure to 23,000. On the other hand, the number of deaths due to injuries in and about the home declined to about 27,000, or by about 500 from the 1971 total.

Job-related fatalities were slightly lower than the 1971 figure of 14,200. About 3,600 of these deaths are included in the estimated motor vehicle statistic.

According to Metropolitan Life, more than 1,500 persons in the United States lost their lives during 1972 in catastrophic accidents, that is, accidents taking five or more lives. The catastrophic death toll was well above the average for the past 10 years and exceeded the 1971 total by about 350.

This excess reflects the heavier loss of life in natural catastrophes (hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, etc.) accidents in mines and quarries and railroad accidents.

In contrast, accidents in civilian aviation were responsible for slightly fewer catastrophic deaths in 1972 than in the previous year.

The number of catastrophic deaths due to motor vehicle accidents, as well as those due to fires and to military aviation accidents, was about the same in both years.

During 1972, there were seven major catastrophes, each of which caused 25 or more deaths; in the aggregate they resulted in 750 deaths.

The two largest disasters were the flash flood on June 9 in the Rapid City, S. D., area, which killed 237 people, and Hurricane Agnes, which struck Florida on June 19, raged up the eastern seaboard and unleashed the most extensive floods in the country's history, causing 122 deaths.

The third largest disaster of the year occurred in Buffalo Creek, W. Va., on Feb. 26, when an improperly engineered dam made from mine wastes collapsed, flooding the valley and claiming 118 lives.

There were two aviation disasters; the crash of the TWA jetliner in the Florida Everglades on Dec. 29, with a death toll of 101 — the first disaster involving a jumbo jetliner — and the crash of a jetliner into a residential neighborhood in Chicago on Dec. 8, which took the lives of 46 persons.

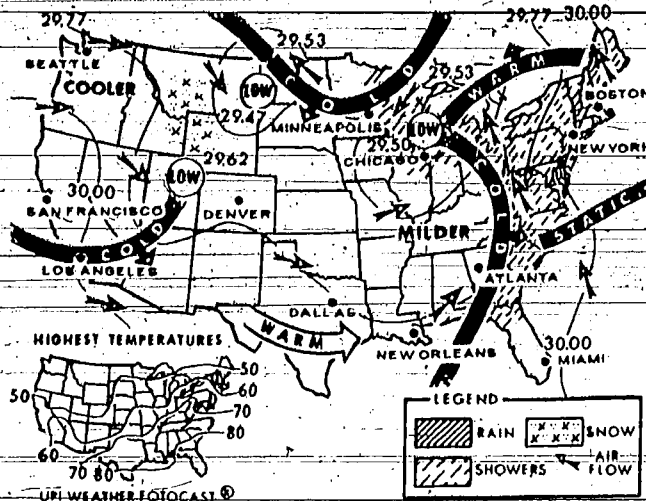

On May 2, 91 miners died in a fire in a silver mine Kellogg, Idaho.

The other major disaster occurred in Chicago, Ill., on Oct. 20, when 44 persons were killed as a result of a collision of two commuter trains — the nation's worst railroad accident in 14 years.

Union Pacific reports 1972 earnings up 16%

OMAHA, Neb. — Union Pacific Corp. reached two significant milestones in achieving record 1972 results.

The firm is "guardedly optimistic" about 1973 according to the 1972 annual report released to nearly 90,000 stockholders and debenture owners this past week.

Earnings reported for 1972 rose 16 per cent to top the $100 million mark, and revenues and sales exceeded $1 billion for the first time.

Commenting on the Rock Island merger case, Frank E. Barnett, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said many of the conditions included in the recommended report and order of an Interstate Commerce Commission administrative law judge, if upheld by the Commission, may well render the recommendations "utterly unworkable."

Although the strong growth trend in the economy will benefit the corporation in all of its business areas, Barnett cited two major challenges confronting the railroad industry, "the outcome of which could have a significant effect on our overall corporate performance this year. The first is a severe cost-price squeeze. Gains from recent freight rate increases have fallen far short of offsetting the cost of higher wages and benefits. Some relief would result if the Interstate Commerce Commission would move promptly to approve needed rate increases so clearly justified by increases in wage and other costs. Under present day circumstances the traditional regulatory lag is inexcusable," he said.

"Of equal importance is the absolute necessity for a realistic atmosphere at the bargaining tables in connection with the 16 rail union contracts that are subject to renegotiation by July 1," he said.

"The other major challenge is one in which all industry and the American public have a vital stake. It is that of assuring the continuation of service by the Penn Central. It is difficult to overestimate the effect on the economy of even temporary cessation of operations by that railroad, which is involved in handling 20 per cent of all rail freight in the United States," he said.

Breeder reactors power source

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Western United States is going to remain in a state of semi-crisis as far as energy is concerned for at least the next decade, a nuclear engineer said Monday.

Walter Gajewski, manager of operations engineering for the Hanford Engineering Laboratory, said, "for about the next 10 years we are going to continue in a semi-crisis period until we get the breeder reactors on line."

Gajewski, addressing a group of about 100 engineers on the "energy crisis," said currently nuclear power produces about 10 per cent of the total energy used in the nation but by the year 2000 this figure will have to increase to about 50 per cent.

He said most of this new thermal energy will have to come from breeder reactors since, if it doesn't, the fuel supply will only last for about 50 years. "A breeder reactor" is one which makes more fuel than it uses.

"It is estimated that with the availability of breeder reactors that the year 2000 we can manufacture more fuel than we use to the tune of having available to us resources for about 500 years," Gajewski said.

The engineer said it was hoped by the persons at Hanford that it would be the site of the second breeder reactor authorized by President Nixon in 1971.

"We have the space for it," he said. "We have people who can accept this type of reactor. We do not have the problem with environmentalists as they do in other areas because the people of the tri-cities have grown up with nuclear reactors."

Soybean crops may lag

By BERNARD BRENNER
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reports on farmer enrollment in the 1973 feed grain program have left some government officials here speculating that further changes in the program may be needed to fully meet administration goals for a 1.5 billion bushel soybean crop this year.

Sign-up in the program began Feb. 5. A report on enrollment through March 2 shows that 553,364 farms have signed up to participate in the program. But only 15.5 per cent of those enrolling through March 2 had chosen the "option B" phase of the program which was specifically designed to encourage expanded soybean production.

Under the "option B" plan, farmers qualify for price supports and direct payments without idling, or setting aside, any acreage.

Growers choosing this option are required to hold 1973 feed grain acreage down to their 1972 level. This means the acreage which had been "set aside" last year would be eligible for planting this year — but with a strong push toward soybeans since it could not be used for additional corn.

Administration officials had been hoping that about 40 per cent of farmers enrolling in the program would choose the "B" plan. But the March 2 report showed 84.5 per cent of the enrollees were choosing another option under which they must "set aside" acreage equal to 25 per cent of their feed grain planting base, and then are free to plant as much corn as they choose.

One agriculture Department official said Thursday the final sign-up could show growers intending to plant the $4 million acres of soybeans the Agriculture Department is seeking to boost production of that vital and currently high-priced crop.

But assistant agriculture secretary Carroll G. Brunthaver indicated he was personally doubtful the soybean production goal could be reached unless further changes are made in the program.

Brunthaver said officials will review the final sign-up figures and a farmers planting intentions report, which is due on March 15, before finally deciding whether to make new soybean-boosting program changes.

One possible, widely-discussed change which could be made is a new regulation which would allow growers to plant soybeans on acreage designated for idling, or "set aside."

Insect training

TWIN FALLS — Three area insect training sessions will be conducted by University of Idaho extension services March 19-21 at 9 a.m.

Roland Portman, extension entomologist, will discuss beneficial and destructive insects affecting area crops, and characteristics of insecticides used locally.

Dick Fuehrer, agriculture extension agent, announced today that meetings will be in Burley Monday in the room opposite the county agent's office; in Twin Falls Tuesday in the College of Southern Idaho vocational building, main auditorium, and at Gooding Wednesday in the Gooding County courthouse meeting room.

Residents of Jerome and Buhl are urged to attend the Gooding meeting as the Twin Falls meeting may be crowded, Fuehrer said.

Wool market outlook bright

SHOSHONE — The lamb and wool market outlook is the brightest it has been in a number of years. L. M. Williams, executive secretary of the Idaho Woolgrowers Association, said:

Williams was the featured speaker at the annual Lincoln County Marketing Association meeting. Ivan Hopkins, secretary, announced Thursday after the meeting.

Williams outlined some of the activities of the National Woolgrowers and American Sheep Producers Council. He said now is a good time to get into the sheep business.

The problem of predator animal control was discussed thoroughly in a question and answer period.

Reed, Hulet, Wendell, a director of the association and an employee of the Idaho Sheep Commission, discussed three items that he felt were of importance to members: disease increase, multiple burns and pregnancy testing.

Charles Pendleton, who has been president the past year, congratulated the members on what he felt was improved quality of wool being marketed by the association and encouraged them to strive for a still better product.

The group voted to continue sponsoring an award to a L.I.C. FFA member of each Lincoln, Jerome and Gooding counties of their fairs based on the most outstanding breeding project.

The board of directors will meet at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at which time the wool pool will be sold. The wool must have been consigned to the pool no later than March 9 to be included in the sale of the 1973 wool pool.

After a discussion on tick and lice control, the group agreed that the best method is dipping, however a spray at a two-week interval would be second best.

Officers elected for the year include Emil Klimes, Jerome, president; Tom Jackson, Jerome, vice president; Ivan C. Hopkins, Shoshone, secretary; treasurer, and directors in addition to the president and vice president: Hulet and Pendleton.

Mind Your Money

Q — About a year ago, I bought a simulated diamond ring made by Wellington. I had to return it twice because the stone came loose.

While trying to fix the stone more solidly in the setting, I'm convinced it was cracked and chipped. Now, they want me to pay for a new stone. Is this fair? G. C. Green Lane, Paris.

A — It may not seem fair, but the procedure is in line with the company's guarantee. The stone is guaranteed to maintain its fire and luster. Nothing is said about cracking or chipping.

Gemologists claim the Wellington fake diamond is among the most lustrous of the simulated stones but it is also one of the softest. It's made of strontium titanate which is quite soft.

In general, you probably shouldn't get a ring with a strontium titanate fake diamond if you plan to wear it a lot. This beautiful but relatively soft stone goes better in earrings and pendants that won't be bumped against hard objects.

One of the hardest fake diamonds is the YAG (yttrium aluminum garnet) stone. It might not have the fire of the softer strontium titanate, but it's hard enough so some stores will give you a guarantee against breakage.

Q — We purchased a condominium town house which required joining an owners' association. Membership entitles us to use special recreational facilities and all maintenance is to be taken care of by the association.

We pay a monthly fee for this membership but the upkeep described in the maintenance contract is not being properly taken care of. Can we withhold payment until this work is done? C. R. C., Kansas City, Mo.

A — No. The management might put a lien on your house if you don't pay. If your project was backed by the Federal Housing Administration, you're in luck.

You can get your nearest FHA office to investigate your project's management. If it's not an FHA project, get in touch with your local planning board. Your county government has the phone number.

You should have found out more about your condominium's management before you bought. The major selling point of a condominium over individual home ownership is the fact that you're going to have maintenance and recreation managed for you.

Q — What's the difference between USP and IU in measuring the potency of vitamins and drugs? Why are some medicines and vitamins measured in units and some measured in grams or milligrams? M. L. B., Los Angeles, Calif.

A — USP stands for US Pharmacopoeia and IU stands for International Units. These units of measure were developed years ago when it was difficult to determine exact weights of specific chemicals and medicines and vitamins.

The industry is turning more and more to listing ingredients by exact metric weight in milligrams. The old units were based on the amounts of drugs necessary to get certain reactions in test animals. The milligram measure is more precise.

Q — I used a plastic dresser scarf on top of my TV console. When I removed the scarf, some of the plastic stuck to the TV's wood finish. Can this be removed without harming the wood? M. H. S., Kansas City, Mo.

A — Probably not. In the future, don't put anything on top of the TV, especially plastic. It's not a good idea to put any plastic covers on good wood finishes because the plastic can somehow migrate into the wood.

Heart disease in high-grazers

SALT LAKE CITY — Research at the University of Utah Medical Center into a heart disease affecting cattle which graze at high elevations may someday help scientists better understand related conditions in human beings.

The condition in cattle, termed brisket disease, is characterized by high blood pressure in the circulatory system of the animals' lungs. Also referred to as pulmonary hypertension, the condition eventually leads to heart failure.

Brisket disease in cattle is known to occur in Utah, Colorado and New Mexico, and cattle grazing at high altitudes in other parts of the world can also be affected by the oftentimes fatal condition.

"Human beings are more often affected by systemic hypertension, or high blood pressure in the arterial system of the body," said Dr. Hiroshi Kuida, chief of the division of cardiology at the Salt Lake City-based medical center.

But, he added, humans are also subject to pulmonary hypertension under certain circumstances.

In humans, pulmonary hypertension is prevalent in patients with chronic heart and lung diseases, especially in places where people dwell at high elevations. This is true even in Salt Lake City and Denver, Dr. Kuida said.

It is the relationship between pulmonary hypertension and heart failure that led Dr. Kuida and a team of researchers to study the condition in cattle.

"We are concentrating our current research efforts on why bovine (cattle) pulmonary vessels are so reactive to various stimuli," Dr. Kuida said. "If we can understand why cattle are so extreme in this regard, we may gain insights into human disorders that affect lung blood vessels."

Dr. Kuida said cows, particularly young ones appear to be the most susceptible to altitude-dependent pulmonary hypertension. In contrast, sheep graze at higher altitudes without being affected.

"Many falls somewhere in between the two in the spectrum," he said.

Dr. Kuida said ranchers have known of the disease for over 50 years, but they didn't equate the deaths with heart disease or the lower oxygen pressure found at high altitudes. Instead, they speculated that death resulted from the cattle eating certain plants or having some nutritional deficiency.

University of Utah research into the condition spearheaded by Dr. Joseph L. Thorne began in 1957 and within a short time scientists were able to positively determine that brisket disease was caused by the oxygen shortage and the resultant effect on the blood vessels in the lung.

Cattle are usually taken to high pastures near the end of May, and the symptoms make their appearance in some cattle during August or early September. The stricken animal becomes lethargic, suffers from diarrhea and generally "doesn't look right" to the cattlemen, said Dr. Kuida.

In the final stages, the afflicted animal suffers swelling in its neck, or the so-called "big neck." Even at this stage, the animal may survive if it is taken to a lower elevation, he said.

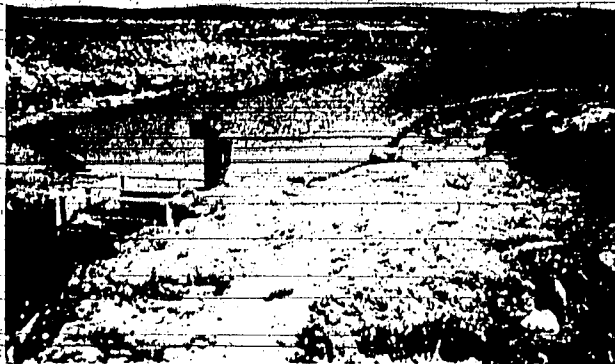

Dr. Kuida indicated that while it was possible to prevent brisket disease by not exposing herds to the high mountain ranges, it was economically unfeasible for cattle ranchers to forego using such lands.

Therefore, the rancher either has to absorb a certain loss of his calves, or get afflicted animals to a lower elevation when they are found.

Dr. Kuida also said the studies of brisket disease could lead to better understanding of various high altitude sicknesses affecting man, such as chronic mountain sickness, acute mountain sickness and acute pulmonary edema of high altitude.

Chronic mountain sickness refers to lung and heart failure suffered by persons adapted to high altitude living, while the acute form occurs in low altitude dwellers traveling quickly to higher elevations without acclimatizing.

Severe forms of the latter may lead to acute pulmonary edema, which can be fatal unless the stricken person is given oxygen or taken to a lower elevation, he said.

Northside Canal Co. sediment pond

Engineers research sediment

KIMBERLY — C. E. Brockway, engineer with the University of Idaho, and J. A. Bondurant, agricultural engineer with the Agricultural Research Service are conducting research on design and operation criteria for irrigation return flow sediment detention ponds.

Under present irrigation management some streams and rivers are continually being loaded with sediment from irrigation drainage streams. Eliminating irrigation runoff would eliminate sediment other than that produced by rainfall runoff.

However, since there is a lag in improving irrigation management, building sediment ponds is one means of controlling sediment. More information is needed about the design criteria of sediment ponds for effective sediment removal.

An attempt to provide this needed information is being made in a cooperative study with the Northside Canal Co. on irrigation return flow streams in Jerome and Gooding counties.

Sediment ponds are being designed, constructed and maintained and the effectiveness of each in reducing the amount of sediment transported into the Snake River is being determined in a four year study.

California couple files court suit

BOISE (UPI) — Alleging misrepresentation, a California couple has brought suit in federal court to recover $75,000 they claim they invested in Calico Enterprises Inc. of Kelheim.

Philip B. and Pamela Ritzau brought the action against Robert L. Brown Jr., Richard W. Lomas and John C.

Albertson and their wives. Their suit contends Brown, Lomas and Albertson comprise the partnership of Warm Springs West which allegedly owned the property on which Calico Restaurant Hotel was located.

The Ritzaus allege all the defendants personally are liable for the eventual collapse of Calico.

Special events mark Girl Scout Week

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Girl Scouts are joining other scouts throughout the United States in special observances this week.

Girl Scout Week is celebrated annually during the week of March 12, the anniversary of the first troop meeting. Traditionally there are seven service days, each emphasizing a particular Scouting activity.

On Girl Scout Sunday, today, Scouts demonstrate their understanding of the first part of the Girl Scout Promise, Duty to God. Twin Falls Girl Scouts will attend services together at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension. Scouts sponsored by the First Christian Church will observe services there before joining the other group.

Monday is homemaking day. During the year, on Brownie troop made homemade mints for one of the nursing homes. The Cadette troop, seventh, eighth and ninth grade girls, assisted the Brownies in making cookies for a program for their parents.

Citizenship Day will be observed Tuesday. The Cadette Troop is working on "The Challenge of Active Citizenship." This is a project for the whole year, involving badge work such as government, conservation and world understanding.

Wednesday is set aside as Health and Safety Day. Many activities during the year revolve around the subject of good safety practices.

Thursday is International Friendship Day. During the year, girls visit museums, attend concerts, learn songs and make things to add to their knowledge and appreciation of other cultures.

Arts Day is scheduled for Friday when the troops share with other Scouts their new knowledge of International Friendship.

The week's activities will conclude Saturday — Out-of-Doors Day. Scouts are aware that "outing" is 19 per cent of Scouting and take every opportunity to experience the awe and wonder of the outdoors.

South ruffed in dummy, led a spade and finessed his six-spot. This deep sea finesse was necessary and also safe. South knew that West's bidding had shown 13 red cards.

After this start, South ruffed a second diamond high, led dummy's last low spade. Finessed the nine after East played the seven. Ruffed his last diamond. Came to his hand with the ace of clubs. Discarded dummy's two hearts on the ace and king of trumps and made the rest of the tricks with clubs.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old wife and mother. We have six darling little girls. We kept hoping for a boy, but never had one.

I had my horoscope read last week, and this lady told me I had another baby it would be a boy! This really got me all excited, and if I could be sure I'd have a boy, I would have another baby. I love my six little daughters dearly, but I wouldn't want another girl.

Do you have any faith in astrology? I am an Aries and my husband is a Libra if that means anything.

WANTS A BOY

DEAR WANTS: I had my horoscope read last year by an expert who did not know who I was. She told me that I had hidden talents and I should try to find some kind of career to fill my idle hours. She also said my husband (who, incidentally has never changed a light bulb) was handy around the house. If you want to gamble go to Las Vegas.

Astrology gamble

DEAR ABBY: After 23 years of being a virgin I gave myself to a guy I thought I loved. I never had another guy and never wanted one—until now. I've never discussed my sex life with anyone so I really don't know if my case is special or not. My boy friend calls me a nagging pain-in-the-neck. You see, he doesn't kiss me before or after. He never was overly affectionate but he used to kiss me more before I gave in to him.

Maybe I'm expecting too much, but I feel so cheap having sex with a guy who doesn't even kiss me. This isn't what I expected lovemaking to be like at all. I am a clean and attractive girl, but it seems like my boy friend wants just one thing, and after he gets it he hardly pays any attention to me. Is there something wrong with me? Or is it him?

DEAR FEELING: First, let's get our definitions straight. "Having sex" and "making love" are two different things. Having sex is grabbing whoever is handy, right now, without tenderness or preliminaries. Making love is caring and sharing and wanting to give pleasure more than getting it. You want someone to make love to you. Your boy friend wants someone to have sex with.

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 years old and I'm going with this great guy who wants to marry me. Well, I'm 250 pounds, and he's always after me to lose weight, but I'm happy the way I am.

It may sound crazy, but I enjoy making people laugh, and being fat helps a lot. I am not self-conscious about the way I look. In fact, I make jokes about it. Also, when I walk down the street alone at night I feel safer than a girl with a good figure. Will you please tell my boy friend, and other guys, these girls are overweight, that it doesn't bother us as much as they think.

JEROME — Featured this month at the Jerome Civic Club Memorial Library is a display of rugs, afghans and a bedspread, designed and constructed by C.R.N. Shepherd.

Shepherd, who left Jerome Thursday for a new position as a vice president with the First Security Bank in Boise in charge of a special servicing center, is well known in Jerome for the outstanding crocheted work he does.

Most of the items on display were constructed since last July, with a combination of basic crocheted stitches which is called the Shepherd stitch, because it was created by Shepherd. His new technique of carrying the thread made it possible for him to make the "Coat of Arms" crest by carrying 41 skeins of yarn at one time and eliminating the use of knots.

The crest depicts a shield with the Rajan helmet, olive branch, dove of peace and eternal flame of life, carried on the wings of an eagle and guarded by the royal lions. The motto is "Strength and Peace."

Also on display is a bedspread which took Shepherd over 13 years to complete, and that won the grand national award in the grange contest in 1970 and a special award from Coats and Clarks. Shepherd also developed a special stitch for the bedspread.

Each item on display was designed and the color coordinations layed out by Shepherd.

Female detective carries own weight

By BONNIE JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — She carries a gun, a badge and according to her boss, her own weight in the everyday work routine of the Twin Falls Police Department's detective division.

Nancy Trueblood, the mother of two young children and a seven-year veteran of the police department, is now Magic Valley's only woman detective. Since the first of the year she has been handling all check cases and is subject to other investigative assignment on crimes in the city.

By handling the check cases, which constitute a large share of the department's work, she can free other more experienced detectives for other investigations, says Capt. Tim Qualls, head of the detective division.

"It isn't just a case of women's liberation moving into law enforcement," Qualls said, "but the practical application of the contributions women can make to the profession. Qualls said he feels women have definite investigative abilities and in fact many Supreme Court rulings require a woman present at the crime scene for such things as searching female suspects arrested by officers.

Capt. Qualls said he believes women work as well in such assignments as check investigation as do the male detectives, and can assist in many phases of burglary investigation, drug cases, latent fingerprinting and similar matters.

Nancy, the wife of Lyle Trueblood, joined the police department in 1965. She worked as a secretary in the detective division and for the past several years has been doing much of the work she now handles in the official capacity as a woman detective.

Police Chief Frank Barnett said she is one of the first women detectives in Idaho, the only other he knows of being assigned to the Boise department. In other states, many larger cities have several women in the detective divisions, he said.

Should a major crime, such as a murder, occur tomorrow, Nancy would be called on along with the male members of the division to investigate and process evidence at the scene, Qualls said.

Mini-Reviews

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Public Library officials have released mini-reviews for some of the new books recently received by the library.

"Like a Great River" by Herbert Stroup. "Like a Great River" gently probes the ancient tributaries of Hinduism and flows them through time and territory.

"The Lonely Stranger" by Charity Blaschke. Set in the back streets of an 18th century Parisian with the first murmurings of revolution, here is a poignant romance of unlikely lovers drawn inexorably together by the accidental workings of history and by their own vanished dreams.

"Smoke on the Ground" by Miguel Delibes. The story focuses on a year in the life of a young boy in rural Castile. It is a profoundly touching testament to an uncompromising way of life.

"Super Money" by George Chapman. "The green stuff in your wallet is not the real money." All stockholders and mutual fund holders must learn the nature of super currency.

"Astrology for Skeptics" by Charlotte MacLeod. Once and for all, the author lifts the subject out of the realm of superstition into its proper place somewhere between religion and psychiatry.

"The Descent of Woman" by Elaine Morgan. The author's reasoned reinterpretation of the evolution of the human species leaves few myths unquestioned. The chapter, "What Women Want," is most revealing.

"Journey Into Stone" by Audrey Lindop. A unique story of suspicion, dread, suspense and consternation, nothing much ever seemed to happen in the sleepy little village of Parkley until the night "The Walls" was robbed.

"Paris Was Yesterday, 1925-1939" by Janet Plummer. With an introductory reminiscence by the author, and illustrated with New Yorker's spot drawings, here is a worthy predecessor to the Paris Journals.

"Beloved Prophet" by Khalil Gibran. Here, revealed for the first time to the world at large is the secret love story of Khalil Gibran and Mary Haskell, the famous Lebanese mystic and American school mistress.

"Wild Pitch" by A. B. Guthrie. Against the western background he knows so well, the author created a very human and believable sleuth in Chuck Charleston and, in Jason Beard, the narrator of the tale. Guaranteed to entertain readers.

Nancy does not wear her badge, but like other members of the detective division, carries it, along with a snub-nosed .38 revolver in an unobtrusive manner.

As for the attitude of the male members of the department, Nancy says, "They have treated me great, but they are used to having me around for seven and one-half years anyway."

"Detectives don't get paid by the hour," says Qualls. "And this applies to Nancy as well as the rest of us."

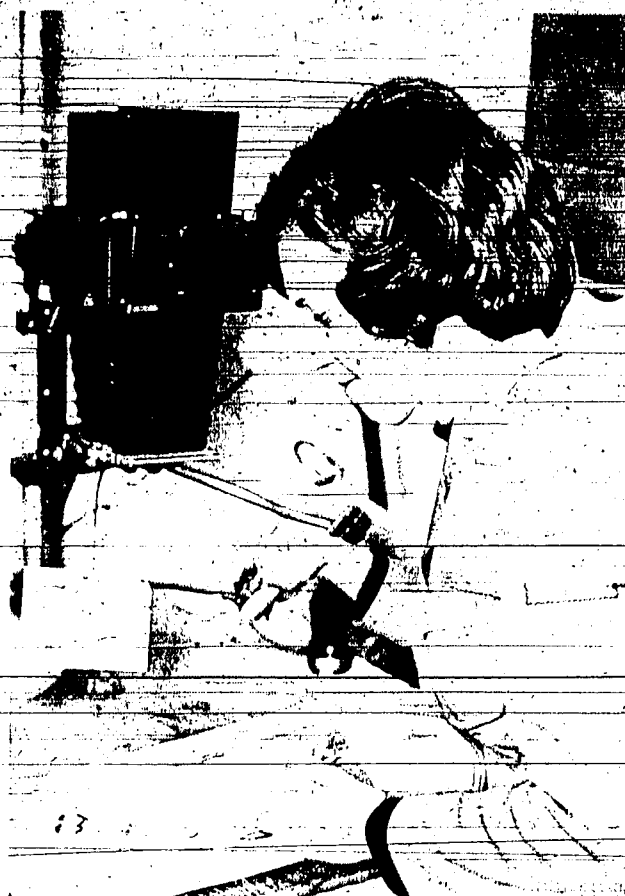

As are the men in the department, she is subject to call 24 hours a day and crime has a way of happening in the middle of the night or at other inconvenient hours.

"I have been aware of this for seven years because of my work as a secretary in the department. When something major happens the officers have to have reports and information written up immediately," she said.

Although her career as a detective is just beginning, Nancy says she is going to enjoy it.

"It's fascinating work if you don't mind unusual situations," she said.

As for special training, Qualls said the female detective has been learning for seven and one half years and in addition will be schooled in investigative procedure, photography, finger printing and other special techniques.

Checks prints

WOMAN DETECTIVE — Nancy Trueblood prepares to photograph a piece of paper representing a bogus check, which has been sprayed to treat it for finger prints. When photographed, the prints can be preserved for further investigation.

Book Review

By ALLEN HENZ
Twin Falls Public Library

TWIN FALLS — In "The God Machine," William Jan Watkins has written an all too possible modern horror story.

Set in the near future, the author describes an America that has become totalitarian and environmentally ruined. Watkins brings out three themes in his work. Blind obedience can lead to political and environmental ruin; second, a small group can successfully thwart a vast organization, and, third, is the concept of the Amorphous (the collective name for the freedom fighters).

At the Amorphous, nobody corrects anybody else. There are no bosses, and nobody does things against other people's wills just because someone else thinks it's good for them. Each person is free to choose his own life style.

Watkins writes in a style that is similar to both George Orwell and Michael Crichton.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 11, 1973

GENERAL TENDENCIES: In the early hours of the day most everyone will appear overanxious but after attending the services of your choice a more calm and optimistic point of view will prevail. The evening is good for romance and recreation. Keep relaxed.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't get into arguments at home because neither you nor kin are feeling quite up to par during the day, but at night all is harmonious. One critical word could lead to trouble.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to use care in motion during day or you could run into real trouble. Also, be careful when making purchases. Don't go off on some tangent because you are not in a good mood.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get your budget better organized and you need not fear being short of money. A feeling of depression should be easily removed. Use practical methods and you soon cheer up.

SCORPIO (June 22 to July 21) Try to cheer up those who are depressed and then much benefit can come from this tonight. Take the time to improve your appearance. Use that fine taste you possess.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 22) Predicating on tenets that can give you a feeling of serenity is fine in the morning. Evening can be spent with cheerful friends you like. Be sure to do those errands. Study tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't appear disappointed when a friend is unable to do you a favor. Do the work necessary to gain your personal aims. Avoid one who likes to undermine your efforts. Be gracious.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take up risks whatever with your reputation, especially during the day. Civic matter is best handled in the evening. Make big strides to improve harmony in the home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have fine ideas but make sure that you fast-digest them with a clever individual before you do anything about them. Steer clear of a fast-talking newcomer. Be wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your intuitive faculties are likely to be faulty today, so don't follow their promptings or you could get into a lot of trouble. Plan the future more intelligently. Read tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Steer clear of an associate who is too emotional during day or evening you can come to a far better understanding. A situation arises that you don't like, but handle it wisely.

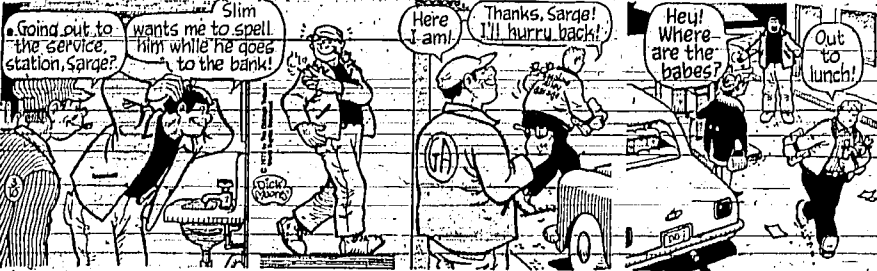

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do whatever will show those who have been good to you that you are most appreciative. You are not in the right mood to work so get busy improving your state of health. Be poised.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A fine day to have the entertainment you want but be sure you're not extravagant in doing so. Making plans for the spring now is wise. Take your rightful place in society. Be wise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ...he or she will be one of those young persons who appears to be more serious than the case may be. Be sure to give the right diet, have cheerful persons about, and give the right spiritual training that will bring out the true light in this nature. The field of business is very fine here, where much money can be made early in life. Fine ability at sports.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

What's What

L. M. Boyd

A feminine client inquires: "If a husband could have everything in a perfect wife, what qualities would she possess, according to your Love and War man?" That's easy, he says. In order: Sincerity, good humor, personality, a beautiful face, a dandy figure without beneficial mechanical undergar, money and intelligence.

YOU DON'T HEAR much about them, but worldwide there are hundreds of thousands of maimed people, blinded, deafened, cut speechless or shot insensible who got into such tragic condition in suicide attempts that failed. Their pain is terrible. No, sir, it's not an occasional occurrence. Hospital records show four out of five would-be suicides just don't pull the thing off cleanly.

Q. "WAS THERE really a Robinson Crusoe?"
A. There was really an Alexander Selkirk, a Scottish quartermaster who was marooned alone for five years on the island of Mas-a-Tierra off Chile. Writer Daniel Defoe modeled his Crusoe character after Selkirk.

MOST PAINFUL
Pain is measured in something called "dols." It's taken from the Latin word "dolor" for pain. Most migraine headaches register five dols; for pain. Most toothaches two dols. The average man rarely suffers more than six dols at any one time. But the strange boys who worked this out say a woman in childbirth can be expected to experience up to 10 dols, the greatest pain routinely suffered by any humans.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW was a grouchy old cuss. When the Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace asked him to autograph some books which they intended to sell for $50 apiece at a fund-raising auction, he wrote them a snappy letter, saying no, plus: For that piece of paper, they got $170.

I WILD LIFE
Most any big cat, like a lion and a tiger, will fight off the predators to keep what it catches. I mean it. A hyena tries to get an antelope steak, but either the antelope or the hyena dies in the process, said hyena is in for a fight. But the cheetah is different. It never defends its kill. Scavengers can bounce right in, up to take their share. Also, the cheetah is the only big cat that almost never roars. It can, but just doesn't.

IN RAPID REPLY to a customer, must report, embezzlement cost the banks just about twice as much as the robberies cost them.

NO, SIR, INSURANCE rates aren't standardized, not at all. Rates for the insurance, for instance, vary up and down by 170 per cent. Term life policies as greatly as 140 per cent. Home owners' coverage, as much as 60 per cent. Better shop.

Official Air Force band to appear in TF

Air Force band sets TF visit

TWIN FALLS — The United States Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants are scheduled to appear in Twin Falls at 8 p.m. April 1, at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

The concert, sponsored by the Air Force Association, is limited to 1,000 seats for the one evening. Admission is free, according to John Conover, Magic Valley president of the association.

Tickets may be obtained for individuals and families by filling out coupons appearing regularly in the Times-News and mailing them to the Air Force Association, Post-Office Box 926, Twin Falls. Family unit tickets will be limited to five. Tickets may also be obtained by visiting the Air Force Recruiting Office at 132 2nd St. E., Twin Falls.

The United States Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants are considered America's International Ambassadors, Conover said. Since it was organized in 1942, the band has made 12 international tours and has visited over 50 countries on five continents.

The band and the Singing Sergeants have the distinction of being the world's most travelled musical organization. They have flown in excess of 7,500 hours, and have covered more than 1,600,000 miles on land and in the air. Most important is the fact that they have played in person to more than 25 million people.

Feeling strongly that concerts in America by the Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants should be open to all citizens regardless of their ability to purchase tickets, Col. Gabriel, commander and conductor, instituted the semi-annual U.S. concert tours with each program sponsored directly by the US Air Force as a public service without admission charge.

Guest artists who have highlighted the Band's International concert series have included Doc Severinsen, Carmen Dragon, Karel Husa, Sketch Henderson and Jester Hairston.

Other sponsors of the Air Force Band Concert here are: The Twin Falls Bank and Trust Co., the Times-News and Sierra Life Insurance Co.

Chlorinators brought to aid water in Miami

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Two huge chlorinators were flown in Friday to purify this resort area's drinking water, but health officials said it will be a day or two before tap water is safe for drinking, ice cubes and tooth brushing.

There was no panic in Miami Beach or in the neighboring communities of Surfside, Bal Harbour, Bay Harbor Islands and Indian Creek, Village, which together house 150,000 persons at this time of year. Visitors and year-round residents complained over their uniced martinis and searched mended that residents boil their water before drinking it. Miami Beach officials said the county health authorities charge was irresponsible. They said there is nothing wrong with the water. "I think the economic harm done to this city was immense," said Mayor Chuck Hall. "It will take a long time to undo what never happened." City Manager Frank Spence blamed the announcement of improper testing procedures. Some hotels and restaurants agreed with the officials and continued to serve tap water.

Wendell council wants to drain two lagoons

WENDELL — City Council members here met with Hugh Hedges, city engineer, to discuss obtaining permission from downstream users to drain the two city lagoons by means of an irrigation ditch. The council met Thursday night in the city hall. If permission cannot be gained from users, an extra 25 per cent construction cost will be required for the new Gooding city sewage system because sewer lines will have to be constructed to divert water from the construction area. Hedges told the council it would be a "one shot deal" and he anticipates no problem with the Department of Health. It is necessary for the water to be chlorinated before it goes into the ditch which is part of the Northside Canal Co. system, he said.

The city authorized a 5.5 per cent pay increase retroactive from Jan. 1 for all city employees.

Bids for a new city water storage tank were opened but were higher than engineer's estimates and no acceptance was made. A special meeting is set for 1 p.m. Monday at city hall to discuss the bids.

Bids included Home Plumbing, Twin Falls, $32,700; Pittsburg-Des Moines Steel Co., Provo, Utah, $35,000, for tank, base, piping and chlorinator.

City superintendent Ivan Myers told the council the city is pumping the lagoons down but they are still full. He said the Department of Health has tested the oxygen level and it is increasing so the city should not have the odor problem of the past.

James Strong was employed as city dump supervisor on a 60 day trial basis $150 a month. Mayor Eugene Soares said, "The city dump is in bad shape and there are dead animals scattered everywhere."

The city will pipe 600 feet of Northside Canal Co. ditch east of the city limits and will advertise for a dog catcher. The mayor reminded Wendell citizens dog licenses are due and the council discussed action to be taken in the case of delinquent dog tags.

What you're saying . . .

QUESTION: Do you as a small-businessman keep in touch with the actions of the Idaho legislature? Do you contact legislators personally with regards to legislation about which you feel strongly?

How close do you keep in touch with the legislature?

NORMA CRANDALL, owner Crandall's Flower Shop, Twin Falls:

"Only just the newspapers. I don't take any special publication. If I had an opinion and anyone would listen, I'd probably express it."

"We do belong to the Society of American Florists which does a great deal of lobbying on the national level. There's a lot of fussing about grocery stores carrying plants, but I don't think it's hurting us that much."

MERV EDSON, owner Edson's, Twin Falls:

"Well, yes, I keep in touch with it, basically through the Idaho Retailers Association through the different media and through Rotary Club where every other week we've had telephone conversations with different legislators."

"Not particularly. I've voiced an opinion primarily through people who have been working for things for the small businessman."

ALFRED E. DAVIS, SR., owner A. F. Davis Watch Repair Service, Twin Falls:

"No, I haven't taken any active part in it I vote."

"I think a lot but I say nothing. I don't like to talk about what I don't know much about."

JAY DOCKSTADER, owner, Hudson's Shoe Store, Twin Falls:

"Not as much as I should. However, we do belong to the Idaho Retailers Association and I do try to attend one of their meetings each year, if not both of them."

"I'll listen to legislative reports on the radio and read the newspaper. I guess the last time I can say I was real active was when they were phasing out the inventory tax."

"No, not by letter. I've made a trip or two up there. We get most of our correspondence through the Idaho Retailers."

DOUGLAS BROWN, president Claude Brown Music and Furniture Co., Twin Falls:

"I'm sure not as close as I should be. I try to keep track of reports that come through and of course I read about it in the newspaper, but as far as contacting any individual up there, I don't."

"On the occasions when I have made contact with them I haven't had too much luck changing their opinions or making them go my way. I realize they are contacted by many people of opposite opinions."

"No, we haven't (a group lobbyist); not at the state level in any way. Sometimes, your chamber of commerce tells you they try to lobby, and of course we belong to that."

DAVID HOLINKA, manager, BIC Loans, Twin Falls:

"I keep track of it as far as what's happening, but I don't express myself. Anything relating to business I look into a little more closely. I do keep track of it. In 1971 they passed a uniform commercial code which greatly affected our business."

"I think people in Idaho are more aware of what legislators are doing than people in most other states."

Alex is ready for TV

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — (NEA) — Human nature being what it is, Alex Cord is currently trying to find a TV series after turning them down for many years.

Maybe "Genesis II" will do it for him. A pilot-movie by that title will be aired by CBS in March — the tentative date is March 23 — and the network is pretty high on it. It's the new one from Gene Rodenberry, the man who created Star Trek.

Cord says that for 10 years or so they were pounding on his door to get him to do a series. He turned them down flat. But, like most movie actors, he has become disenchanted with the motion picture situation — "The business is falling apart" — and so, for the last two years, he has been looking for a series to do.

"I remember being with Mike Connors when we were both in 'Stagecoach,'" Cord says. "He got the offer to do Munnix then. I wondered why he took it. He said it was because of the money."

"At the time, if I had gotten that same offer I would have turned it down." But, in retrospect, I was wrong. I think now it would have been smarter to take it and Mike made the right move. He doesn't have to work for the rest of his life — and where am I?"

If "Genesis II" has anything of Star Trek's class he may be on the threshold of something good. It's a story of a scientist of today who is caught underground while working on suspended animation. When he's rescued he finds it is 155 years later and he's in a world wrecked by nuclear wars.

Although Cord has never been a science fiction fan he thinks the series has possibilities.

"There's so much interest in science fiction today," he says. "Look how our world has advanced in my own lifetime. I can remember when milk was delivered by a horse-drawn wagon and I've seen men to go the Moon. All in one generation."

Personally, though, Cord is one of those people who prefers to be outdoors, to have his hands dirty, to build his own house. It is the premise of "Genesis II" which intrigues him, however, and he feels the plot can take him, as the protagonist, in many different and fascinating directions.

Cord is one of Hollywood's most interesting people. He began as a rodeo rider, turned actor and now he's wanted about the first novel he ever wrote. He just finished it.

"I loved writing it," he says. "It was a great experience. I hope I can get it published. And I think it would make a great movie, even though there's not part in it for me."

Something else about Cord which is unusual is his marriage. He and his wife, Jeannette Pettet, have a theory about marriage which is, at least, different.

They think that being apart as much as they are together is a good thing. Alex says he is "hopelessly in love" with Jeannette but feels that he also needs an equal amount of time by himself.

"I value my privacy," he says. "I don't like to be tied down. If I'm out with the boys and, at three in the morning, decide I'm having a good time and want to stay, I don't want to feel that I must go home because my wife is waiting for me. If she's sick or something, that's different — than I go home because I want to, not because I feel I have to."

Stewart looks to TV movies

NOT EXACTLY ON THE BEACH! professionally, but finding the right part isn't as easy as it used to be for Jimmy Stewart.

Academy Award-winner James Stewart stars as a homespun lawyer who defends an heiress accused in a triple slaying that uncovers a shocking mixture of family love and hate in "Hawkins on Murder," also starring Strother Martin and Bonnie Bedelia, on "The New CBS Tuesday Night Movies" Tuesday, March 13. Stewart, in his first made-for-television movie, appears as Billy Jim Hawkins, a shrewd country lawyer who enlists the help of his cousin, Sheriff R. J. Hawkins (Martin), and pretty teen-age niece, Theresa Ruth (Margaret Markov), to defend sensitive Edith Dayton-Thomas (Miss Bedelia) accused of killing her father, stepmother and stepsister.

As Hawkins investigates the crime, he learns of tensions in Edith's wealthy household that make up a horror story in themselves. Under pressure from an ambitious district attorney, Harrelson (David Huddleston) to have his client plead guilty, he sets out in unorthodox style to establish the truth.

Stewart, who made his feature film debut in 1935, is a veteran of more than 75 pictures, including "The Philadelphia Story," for which he won an Oscar in 1940, "You Can't Take It With You," "Mr.

"Hawkins on Murder" was directed by Jud Taylor from a script by David Karp, who also produced. Norman Felton was executive producer of the MGM Television production.

Attitudes toward death set for John Hart show

Death as a process of the living, its images and our ostrichlike attitude toward the subject are the focus of a five-part report on the CBS MORNING NEWS WITH JOHN HART (6:30-7:30 a.m. MT) to be broadcast Monday, March 12 through Friday, March 16 on the CBS Television Network.

Why is death always treated euphemistically? If it is the most predictable thing in life, why do we actively avoid seeing it? These are among the questions dealt with on the report, produced by WCCO, the CBS-affiliated station in Minneapolis.

WCCO reporter Don Kludstrup went to a hospital for terminal cancer patients and spoke to patients and nurses there. He interviewed Dr. W. H. Thomas, a terminal patient himself; Ken Crane, whose heart has stopped twice, and two widows who discuss what it feels like to lose a loved one.

Another segment deals with Smith Goes to Washington," "It's a Wonderful Life," "Harvey," "Anatomy of a Murder," "Rear Window" and "How the West Was Won." He has also starred in his own television series.

Tom Nelson, a 17-year-old high school athlete who woke up one morning with a pain in his foot that signaled his death from lymphosarcoma less than a year later.

Helen Moed is producer of the series.

Jean Stapleton speaks out—very quietly (?)

"Oh, my goodness," was Jean Stapleton's startled reply when asked what advice her mother had imparted to her when she turned Sweet Sixteen.

I can tell you quite honestly, mother told me nothing except what not to do and to beware of men. My mother, unfortunately, was part of that generation," admitted Miss Stapleton.

Archie Bunker's wife Edith again plays a mother, starring with Mario Thomas in a new ABC Television Network special, "Acts of Love—And Other Comedies," which airs Friday, night, March 16.

About what she would say to a 16-year-old Miss Stapleton laughed. "I wouldn't have time to tell you today! Now will I go into it in intimate detail because I love my privacy and I'm going to preserve that.

"There's a point which this show makes that the author, Renee Taylor (with her husband Joe Bologna) and I discussed yesterday," continued Miss Stapleton.

"The show begins with this mother (the part Miss Stapleton plays) giving her daughter advice in the best way she knows how, but obviously the mother believes that women are second-class citizens and inferior. She believes that her daughter has an obstacle in the fact that she's a woman. She has a very limited view of herself and life and what life has to offer. And she also believes that a woman must make sacrifices—I mean profound sacrifices—in bringing up a child. Sacrifices that would eliminate or lose one's own identity and life and individualism."

Miss Stapleton continued: "I understand at the end of the show Mario Thomas plays a girl talking to her new baby and she's representing the new, modern view of things which is enlightened. She's saying to her baby: 'I love you but I have a life to lead and you have yours and we're going to lead them and I'm not going to have to lose mine just because I'm a mother'... which is, I think, beautiful. I told Renee I think this is making a 'beautiful point'."

Remembering her own just she said, "My mother didn't embrace that. She wasn't a victim of that kind of thinking. Like Edith Bunker, my mother was afraid or embarrassed or whatever, talking about these things, talking about sex and so forth. But I certainly hope to be able to talk about it with my daughter freely and frankly."

Talking in a voice several octaves lower than on "All in the Family," Jean Stapleton spoke of her own daughter.

"She's 13. It's a beautiful age. It's such a year of growth and change and she's just a wonderful girl—she's such an individual and she's very stable; she's such a good companion, too."

Lots of faces.

COMMEIDIENNE LILY Tomlin of "Laugh-In" fame, will rock it to TV viewers with a number of the characters she made famous as she stars in her own comedy variety show next Friday at 8 p.m.

Sally Kellerman now one of Hollywood's leading actresses

At the height of her success as one of Hollywood's leading actresses, Sally Kellerman finds herself confronted with an unusual dilemma. As she finishes a starring role opposite James Cagney in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Slither," she also finds herself on the threshold of another exciting career as a rock-blues singer with the instant success of her first record album, "Roll With The Feelin'."

Her present inclination is to classify herself as a singer-actress, rather than actress-singer. She wants to emphasize singing while enjoying the best of the two possible worlds by alternating both vocations.

Sally achieved her acting prominence after more than 15 years of hard work with stardom coming only recently on the heels of her memorable portrayal of Hot Lips Houlihan in "M.A.S.H." Then in quick succession she won raves for her role in "The Last of the Hot Hot Lovers," won one of the leads in "Lost Horizon" and, then, what is her favorite characterization to date, played kookie Kitty Kopetzky in "Slither."

But Sally also always has loved singing and also has aspired to a singing career while working at her acting. Unknown to most of her fans and co-workers, she has continued to perfect her vocal technique and last year was signed to a contract by Decca Records.

Decca issued "Roll With The Feelin'" while Sally was still on location with "Slither." She received one of the first albums while in Santa Rose, California, and immediately brought a phonograph and played it that evening for Cagney, Cagney, Peter Boyle and Louise Lasser, director Howard Zieff, producer Jack Sher and the entire crew.

Their initial reaction was as enthusiastic as that of record buyers and disc jockeys across the country. Before "Slither" completed production, she had received news that it was nearing the top of record charts in most major cities.

Another reaction to the album was an offer of an engagement at Los Angeles' famed Troubadour nightclub and the possibility of similar dates in other cities.

Hence, Sally's dilemma to which she has responded by putting aside immediate acting jobs and pledging herself to help promote the record and accepting selected singing engagements. This despite her enthusiasm for Kitty Kopetzky and "Slither," both of which have replaced all other roles and films as her "best-liked" for Sally Kellerman, actress.

Perhaps she can fulfill both her acting and singing dreams in the "best of all possible worlds" as singer-actress Sally Kellerman. Right now, she's well on her way toward realization of both these dreams.

She's a kookie

SALLY KELLERMAN is starred in "Slither" in which she plays a kookie and unpredictable beauty.

Gorman's acting is "humility" lesson

He majored in education in college, worked as a salesman after serving in the Air Force, then switched to acting in the mid-1960s because he had an idea he would do well at it.

The foregoing describes the metamorphosis of Cliff Gorman, talented Broadway actor who makes his made-for-TV film debut in "Class of '63," co-starring James Brodin and Joan Hackett, on the ABC Television Network's "Wednesday Movie of the Week" March 14 (9:30-11 p.m. MST).

"I graduated from New York University in 1958 with a B. S. in education and then spent two-and-a-half years as a lieutenant in the Air Force," Gorman elaborated. "I tried selling for a couple of years, but grew bored."

Gorman made his Broadway debut in 1965 in "Hogan's Goat" and a few years later gained critical acclaim in both the New York state and film versions of "The Boys in the Band" as the birthday party host. He established himself as an actor to be reckoned with when he next starred on Broadway in "Lenny," the biographical drama about acid-tongued comedian Lenny Bruce for which he won a 1971-72 season Tony Award.

The lean, medium-height actor, who made his motion picture debut several years ago in "Justine" and has "Cops and Robbers" with Joe Bologna awaiting release, admits he was quick to sign for "Class of '63."

Their eyes open

IN MGM'S "Slither," James Cagney, Louise Lasser and Sally Kellerman keep their eyes open for a glimpse of mystery-attackers who have followed them to a trailer camp, in the suspense thriller.

Schedule told for tournament

Four games of the 36th annual National Invitation Tournament, college basketball's oldest post-season event, will be broadcast live from Madison Square Garden, New York City, on the CBS Television Network on March 17, 18, 24 and 25. In past years, only two games of the NIT were carried on the Network.

First-round games will be broadcast Saturday, March 17 (noon-2:00 p.m. MT) and Sunday, March 18 (11:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m. MT), with Don Criqui doing play-by-play and Hot Rod Hundley as analyst. A semi-final game will be presented Saturday March 24 (12:00 noon) and the tournament championship game will be broadcast Sunday, March 25 (11:00 a.m.-1 p.m. MT). Criqui, play-by-play, and Pat Summerall, analyst, are the commentators for these two games.

A field of 16 college teams will compete in the tournament, which will be presented on the Network for the eighth straight year. The University of Maryland won last year's tournament, defeating Niagara 100-69.

The March 17 and 18 broadcasts will be produced by Bob Stenper and directed by Tony Vogel. The March 24 and 25 broadcasts will be produced by Chuck Milton and directed by Bob Dittley.

CHECKING A FEW things, Snoopy, the Peanut beagle, makes a dogged attempt to join the action when members of Charles M. Schultz's little cartoon clan mistake a supermarket for a modern art museum today at 5:30 p.m. MST.

"Catholics" drama filming is set "Catholics," a dramatic special adapted by the Irish-born author Brian Moore from his acclaimed short novel, will be broadcast as a "CBS Playhouse 90" presentation next season on the CBS Television Network, it was announced today. It will be filmed this spring in the Irish Republic.

The special, which touches human frailty and faith in a hypothetical future period along the wild, mist-softened, sea-roughened West Coast of Ireland, will mark the first television program produced by award-winning motion-picture producer Sidney Hayers. "CBS Playhouse 90" is under the supervision of Lewis Freedman, executive producer, for the CBS Television Network.

Within the framework of a simple dispute between Rome and an Irish monastic settlement over the fact that a group of monks is celebrating mass in Latin instead of in the prescribed English, the drama runs far deeper. It penetrates subtly to a conflict of faith between an aging, doubt-tormented abbot and a young American priest from Rome who, in keeping with the thinking of this imagined future time, no longer believes in the "real presence" of God.

In book form, "Catholics," which will be published in the United States in March and has been chosen as the March special "alternate Book of the Month Club selection," received much acclaim following its publication last fall in England.

The American Idea scheduled next Sunday over ABC

"We set out to make the ultimate documentary in historical form, a subjective rendering. We were trying for forms that were new."

Alan Landsburg was discussing the concept of "The American Idea," umbrella title for a series of ABC Television specials which premieres on the ABC Television Network Sunday, March 18 with "The American Idea, Part I: The Land."

One year was devoted to researching the project before filming began, and nearly six months of filming went into the first program according to Landsburg, co-executive producer with Laurence B.
Savodove.

Noting that he and producer-director William T. Cartright had filmed a considerable amount of historical material for previous documentaries, Landsburg said, "They were always crises-oriented as touchstones to tell history. This production has a singular point of view. If we put aside political and national crises and examined history from a personal point of view, we felt we would derive film that could celebrate the people."

A writer by background, Landsburg decided that this time he would prefer to adapt from primary sources of material. "It is very personalized material that reflects history rather than tells it," he commented. Letters, diaries, albums, town records, poems and songs and recollections supplied material.

"Every day kids in school learn dates and facts and are acquainted with leading figures of history. In our program we give them a sense of people that they never read about and a feeling of what their lives were like," Landsburg explained.

He revealed that the ABC Television Network "was in a way the genesis for this series, with 'It Was a Very Good Year'

Cassidy claims comedy just like tennis

"Comedy is, for me, the most difficult form of acting or writing," says Tony Award-winner Jack Cassidy. "But I also consider it the most rewarding form because the results are the most immediate."

Cassidy appears on "Ed Sullivan's Broadway," a look, past and present, at the Great White Way which will be broadcast as a special Friday night March 16.

"Comedy is like tennis," says Cassidy. "With comedy, as with tennis, you evoke an on-the-spot reaction and don't have to wait until the end of the performance."

Long a tennis enthusiast, Cassidy is almost as fond of playing on the court as he is of playing on the stage. But the sport is only one of his many hobbies. He also dabbles in paintings and sculpturing and is currently turning his interest in writing into a new facet of his career.

Knicks-Celtics

The New York Knicks invade Boston Garden to battle with their division-leading rivals, the Boston Celtics, on ABC Sports' exclusive live color coverage of quarter-final match of the "CBS Golf Classic" to be broadcast

Saturday, March 17.

Mike Hill birdie on the 11th hole.
Rosburg won the 14th hole to put his team to one down, and Rodriguez made birdie on 17 to even the match. The match went to sudden death, and Rodriguez, after hitting a superb

Times-News ninth annual jaunt to Hawaii makes history with biggest group

Idaho's wide open spaces are in contrast with crowded Honolulu and Waikiki Beach

By O. A. (Gus) KELKER
Editor, Times-News

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. The proof of the journey is in the companionship. And this companionship — a group of real nice people — is what set up the biggest Times-News tour to Hawaii as the best ever. It was the ninth Magic of Hawaii jaunt sponsored by the newspaper and with 80 members it was far and away the most popular. In fact group members found they were in the largest overseas tour party to ever leave Twin Falls.

Utilizing the services of Hughes Airwest, Pan-American and Aloha Airlines the tour group was moved without undue incident. Departure from Twin Falls was "on time" as was departure from Los Angeles to Hawaii, the departure from Hawaii back to Los Angeles and the departure from Los Angeles back to Twin Falls.

The four island tour reversed former Times-News trips and started in Hilo, rather than Honolulu. This arrangement permitted four days at the Reef Hotel on famed Waikiki beach before heading home out of summer and back into winter.

In addition to seeing a lot of scenery, a lot of interesting sights and participating in numerous planned events, tour members also found that this old world is getting crowded.

Living in Idaho, where it is still possible to wander all day 20 or so miles from home and never see anyone, we are spoiled. We all found the outer islands are not crowded with tourists, and we visited three of them — Hawaii, Maui and Kauai. But on Oahu, where Honolulu is located, the story was different.

There was a raffle or two when unexpected hordes of tourists caused problems with our room space and special tours, but tour members took it in stride. We had a time of this on the outer islands. But being on an organized tour, Magic Valley residents and other guests were really fortunate. Hundreds of people — without advance reservations and on their own — didn't even have a place to sleep. One entire planeload of tourists — more than 165 people — were flown back to the mainland only hours after they had arrived because there were no rooms for them.

Newspapers of the Islands, especially the big Honolulu dailies — were full of news caused by the attempt to house the people. Hundreds were taken in by Honolulu residents, others doubled up in available hotel rooms and still others just sat. The Honolulu Star-Bulletin, in a major story, said the "day of the single family dwelling in Honolulu has passed." A state Senator introduced a bill which would fine hotels which overbook and still another would cause rooms to be paid for in advance before they could be confirmed. "Where Oh Where To Put Everybody?" asked a banner headline.

But despite it all there was — and always will be — a "magic" to the Islands. It's difficult to realize you are in just another state of the Union. You keep saying "back in the states" when you should say "back on the mainland." The people just seem different. The Hawaiians look different, of course, with a mixture of Oriental blood and with only some 3,000 pure-blooded Hawaiians still left.

Probably the best received tour was that by boat to Pearl Harbor where on Dec. 7, 1941 it all started. Perhaps the most intriguing was the visit to the Fern Grotto on Kauai and the haunting Hawaiian Wedding Song. Perhaps the most exciting was dinner at the various restaurant entertainment places in Honolulu where the Hula girls still are supreme. Perhaps the most startling was seeing great whales, playing in the offshore area as our two buses approached the old town of Lahaina. Perhaps the most like home was the Iao Valley, known as the Yosemite of the Pacific. Perhaps the most far out was the purchase of Aloha shirts and mugs which we will have to contain until spring in Idaho because their colors are so hot there they would surely melt the snow. Perhaps the contrast was the few numbers of people using the beautiful beaches of the outer islands — and the crowds on famed Waikiki in Honolulu. Perhaps the hardest thing to really let soak in is that all this is less than seven hours by jet from Twin Falls. Another world in less than an ordinary workday.

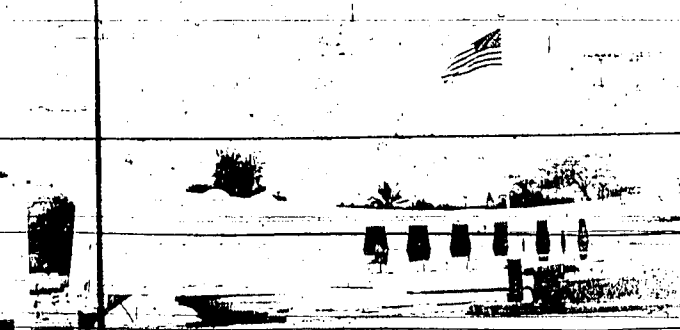

But members of the Times-News tour — with arrangements made by Magic Carpet Travels and with Betty Kelker as tour hostess — saw it all.

Like we said — the proof of the journey is in the companionship — and we had a great bunch of folks.

Miss Twin Falls felt and looked right at home on famed Waikiki Beach in Honolulu.

As a member of the ninth annual Magic of Hawaii tour sponsored by the Times-News, the reigning beauty Miss Sharon Davis-Jerome found ample time to swim in the Blue Pacific and to soak up a little sun while staying at the Reef Hotel on Waikiki. Oahu was only one of four islands Sharon visited with other tour members.

When Sharon posed for this picture with the temperature hovering near 80 in Honolulu — it was snowing back home in Magic Valley. It made the trip all the more enjoyable.

The photo was taken by Gus Kelker, editor of the Times-News and the color separations were made by John Ulrich, Times-News technician.

Sharon is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Davis, Jerome.

Julie Andrews Hour features '30 salute

Julie Andrews and her guests, Carol Lawrence and Steve Lawrence, tip make-believe hats to the '30s on the ABC Television Network's "The Julie Andrews Hour" Saturday night, March 17, with the talented assistance of regulars Rich Little and Alice Ghostley. Also guesting is Fritz Feld.

In addition to the nostalgic sounds of songs of the decade, film from the '30s will be shown including footage from "Betty Boop" and some never-before-shown clips of W. C. Fields.

With Rich Little making like newscaster Walter Cronkite to take viewers backward, Julie and Steve sing "My Sweet Embraceable You" and "You're Driving Me Crazy." Backed by the Charmoli dancers, Carol Lawrence recreates the wacky days of the dance marathon as she sings (and dances to) "Ten Cents a Dance."

Steve and Rich do comedy routine, playing a detective and his son, then Steve takes the wind out of Rich's sails by imitating Bing Crosby.

Julie sings "Sentimental Over You," then Steve and the boys ring the rafters with "Eadie Was a Lady."

Julie and Carol raise male viewers' blood-pressure with "Heat Wave" and Alice Ghostley lowers it with "Little Orphan Annie's Song."

In rapid succession Rich becomes Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Ed Sullivan and Jack Paar and Steve counters with Jimmy Cagney.

The days of the Hit Parade live again with a medley of hit songs including "Begin the Beguine" sung by Julie and Steve.

Carol and dancers stomp their hearts out with "Jambin' at the Savoy" and all join on "Doing the Lambeth Walk." Julie, Carol and the boys go into "The Dipsy Doodle" with synopated vengeance.

The days of "Andy Hardy" are revived with Steve as Andy and Julie as his girlfriend as they sing "Where or When."

Carol, Julie, Steve and Alice mime a barbershop quartet with "Down by the Old Mill Stream," and Rich comes on as Henry Fonda to the music of "Red River Valley."

Julie and the choir sing a number that came out in 1939 as war clouds gathered; "There'll Always Be an England." Everybody helps wrap up the hour with "I Only Have Eyes For You," "You Do Something to Me," "It Ain't Necessarily So," "These Foolish Things" and "I've Got You Under My Skin."

"The Julie Andrews Hour," which is produced by Nick Yanoff and William O. Harbach in cooperation with ITC, originates at ABC Television Center in Hollywood with Bill Davis as director. The choreography is by Tony Charmoli and the music is under the direction of Nelson Riddle.

SATURDAY

Then the Lord became jealous for his land, and had pity on his people. The Lord answered and said to his people, "Behold, I am sending to you grain, wine, and oil, and you will be satisfied; and I will not more make you a reproach among the nations." —Joel 2:18-19—

Melodrama set in Friday movie

Alfred Hitchcock's thrilling suspense drama "The Thirty-Nine Steps," starring Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll and hailed as the most original, literate and entertaining melodrama of its time, will be presented on "The CBS Late Movie" Friday, March 16 in black-and-white on the CBS Television Network.

When the film was first shown in this country in 1935, it was acclaimed as a screen classic and one of the outstanding motion pictures of all time. Hitchcock, who both produced and directed it, was lauded by the critics for introducing the "intellectual" melodrama to American audiences, for his formula for combining mystery and suspense with international intrigue, and for his techniques and refinements of the "chase."

"The Thirty-Nine Steps," based on a novel by John Buchan, starts with Richard Hannay (Donat), a young Canadian, sitting in a London music hall when a man is murdered. A young woman begs Hannay for sanctuary after confessing to the crime, explaining that she is a counterespionage agent, but shortly afterwards she is murdered herself.

Lovely Jay Shurt takes a rest while Lee Hummel wields his racquet on one of the many courts in the year-round sun resort community. Tennis is rapidly resuming popularity as the "in" sport in Palm Springs.

ABC's Tuesday movie is mystery thriller

An attractive under cover policewoman risks her life as she lures a homicidal maniac into a trap in "The Bail," a mystery thriller airing on the ABC Television Network's "Tuesday Movie of the Week" March 13 (9:30 p.m. MST).

Donna Mills stars as Tracy Fleming, a policeman's widow who puts herself on the spot. Also starring in the original 90-minute drama are Michael Constantine, Bill Devane, Arlene Golonka, June Lockhart, Arlen Pittik, Thamus Rasulala and Gianni Russo.

Returning from an assignment in which she helped arrest a dope pusher, Tracy is called into a meeting with Det. Capt. Gus Maryk (Constantine), head of the bureau of detectives. Also involved are detectives Ruggeri (Russo), Nugent (Rasulala) and Solomon (Pittik). Maryk admits a dead-end in investigating the recent rape-murders of four women in the downtown area. He asks for some new ideas.

When a fifth young woman is killed, Tracy, who lives with her son Mickey (Brad Savage) and mother-in-law Nora (Miss Lockhart), volunteers to move downtown. Going undercover as a secretary in an office building, she begins her investigation, asking questions of such people as coffee shop waitress Liz Fowler (Miss Golonka). But progress is slow. Tracy is horrified when Liz becomes the killer's sixth victim. Grimly determined, she takes on the appearance of a nookie, walking the streets day and night in an effort to lure the maniac. Just when Tracy thinks she knows the identity of the murderer, the killer decides Tracy is his next victim.

The Walton children had expected to miss the carnival because they couldn't afford to go. They had saved their pennies for weeks to attend the event but when Grandma broke her glasses they insisted on spending their savings to buy her a new pair.

They were in for a surprise, however, when a night, a clown, a magician and a beautiful acrobat, played by Billy Barty, Gino Corfanti, John Harper and Barbara Davis, respectively, take up residence uninvited in their barn.

Why do people long for the good old days?

Could be the prices back then. Just take a look at these advertisements from early-day newspapers in Twin Falls. They come from issues of 1905, 1906 and 1907. Twin Falls was "born" in 1904.

Take a look at those men's suits for only $6.50. Or a good clean bed for 25 cents a night at the Eureka Hotel. Or one of those hot black stoves by Cole — starting at $3.50.

We just thought it would be interesting to remember these prices the next time you go shopping. Of course, we hope you are making more money today than workers made back in 1905 or so. If you are, you will not notice the difference.

CBS late night series studies San Quentin

"Truman Capote inside San Quentin — Part II" continuing the celebrated author's in-depth interviews at San Quentin, will be presented on the ABC Television Network's late-night series, "ABC Wide World of Entertainment," Tuesday, March 13.

This program will be followed immediately by another special, ABC News' "San Quentin — More Views from Outside," a 30-minute program featuring a panel of California penologists and their views on prisons and prison-reform.

Capote went to San Quentin to talk to convicted murderers, thieves, and forgers and with the prison officials. He conducted interviews with:

— Paul Ferguson, who was convicted with a brother of beating film star Ramon Novarro to death. Ferguson says Novarro "deserved to die" and that his conviction came about because the district attorney built a "fantasy" in the mind of the jury.

— James Brandes, convicted of burglary, forgery, a parole violator and once a member of California's Hell's Angels. His parole officer, he says, had made up his mind and didn't want to hear what he had to say in his own behalf. Treatment by a parole officer, says Brandes, depends on what the officer "had for breakfast."

— Steven Brown, convicted of theft of a vehicle, tells of being shipped from prison to prison because, he claims, he had organized protests. He tells of a plan to work in a "prisoner's union" or with a legal cooperative that will work with prisoners.

— Larry Seiner, convicted of robbery and conspiracy to commit murder. He believes that black people are political prisoners and that black defendants should be judged by blacks.

Capote also interviews Verna Pates, convicted of an assault on a policeman with a deadly weapon; convicted killer Robert Duren, who tells of being beaten in prison; Nathan Ell, convicted of strangling a woman. He also continues his interview with Robert Beausoleil, a friend and member of the Charles Manson "family."

Phoenix auto race is set

The Phoenix 150 Indianapolis Race — the first race of the season for Indianapolis-type cars — will be telecast live (in East and Midwest) on "ABC's Wide World of Sports" Saturday, March 17.

ABC sportscaster—Keith Jackson will report the action from Phoenix International Raceway, assisted by automotive expert Chris Economaki. Expert commentary will be provided by two-time World driving champion Jackie Stewart.

The Phoenix 150 traditionally brings out the season's new cars as drivers and crews experiment in preparation for the Indianapolis 500, which will be seen on the ABC Television Network Monday, May 28.

Four former winners of the Indy 500 will be in the starting field for the Phoenix 150: A. J. Foyt, Mario Andretti and the Unser brothers, Al and Bobby.

Among the top 24 USAC drivers expected to go to the starting line to compete for the guaranteed $30,000 in first-prize money and points counting toward the National Driving Championship are Joe Leonard, who has won the National title the past two years, Lloyd Ruby, Roger McCluskey, Dick Simon, Gordo Johncock, Art Pollard, Swede Savage, Billy Vukovich, Mike Mosely, Gary Bettenhouse and Jim McElreath.

The competition at this year's Phoenix 150 is expected to be the most fiercely contested in the race's history. Several drivers on the USAC tour have recently pushed their cars beyond the magic 200 MPH limit for this type of car.

Phoenix International Raceway is one of the nation's fastest one-mile tracks on which Indianapolis cars compete. It is an asymmetrical, distorted oval with a straightaway on which cars hit speeds in excess of 160 MPH.

Dennis Low will produce the ABC Television Network's coverage of the Phoenix 150 Indianapolis-car Race. The director will be Chet Forte. Roone Arledge is the executive producer of "ABC's Wide World of Sports."

Why the good neighbor made instant grandchildren.

In our time, in our world, the old get hidden away and forgotten much too often.

In a Connecticut city, The American Red Cross—America's Good Neighbor—did something about it.

There, Red Cross Youth each "adopted a grandparent." Strictly one to one. The purpose: regular visits—to make life just a little more worth living for older folks.

A small matter, you may think—especially if there just don't happen to be any older people in your neighborhood, or your life. But it represents just what Red Cross is all about.

Because The American Red Cross is a home town affair. That's why you find us doing different things in different home towns.

We're what you need us to be. Whoever you are.

Wherever you are.

And isn't that what a Good Neighbor is all about?

Be a good neighbor.

Help The Good Neighbor.

She never does two things at once

LONDON — "Applause" has made Lauren Bacall break her avowed rule of never doing two things at once.

"It's such a personal show for me, and I'm doing so much in my life," says the actress about the multi-Tony Award winning Broadway musical which she is doing on the London stage and at London's Pinewood Studios in a special television version to be broadcast on the CBS Television Network Thursday, March 15 10:00-12:00 p.m., MST.

"Once I heard it was being considered for television, I knew I had to do it," continues Miss Bacall. "I didn't want anyone else to do it. Anyway, it's an exciting project because television is something really quite new to me."

"I did do one television play, when I appeared with Noel Coward in 'Blithe Spirit,' but that was a long time ago — and it was live. I've done interview programs, of course, and I did do one commercial for coffee but on the understanding that it would be shown only twice. I did that because I needed the money."

"This is the first time I have starred in a major television production — appeared with Coward, he didn't appear with me — and the first time I've done a taped show."

Miss Bacall was talking in the house she has rented in London's fashionable Belgravia while playing in "Applause."

"My Tony was the first time I ever won any awards in the whole of my career," she exclaimed. "So 'Applause' means a lot to me, quite apart from the role itself. Mind you, I think I'm crazy to have said I would do the show on television while I'm still playing it six nights and two matinees a week in the theatre. It's a demanding, firing part to play. But I'm crazy anyway."

She agreed that "Applause" was important to her because although she has won so much acclaim for her performance on the stage, just one television showing will be seen by those millions who have not watched her in anything for years. Miss Bacall hasn't made a film since 1960.

"A long time," she remarked. "It makes a lot of people think I quit movies, but it wasn't deliberate. It just happened that way. I was offered good things in the theatre, and they were successful. I did 'Cactus Flower,' and it was a big hit. I was in it for two years. Then 'Applause' came along, and it has occupied my life for over three years — since I first began to work on it before it opened at the end of March in 1970.

"Will I go back to films? Maybe, but I am not thinking about the future. My only idea at the moment is to go on doing what I am doing not to the best of my ability. I can't think of any project after this except to do nothing for a spell — just not to work and to give myself a chance to relax."

"I did once say that I planned my life. That was a great mistake because I soon learned that life takes over whatever you try to do. So I stopped planning."

"Applause" is her first musical. She had never sung before she went into the show, although she had always had a musical ear appreciation of music.

"But," she said, "in a way I suppose 'Cactus Flower' paved the way, though I didn't realize it at the time. I hadn't done any stage work for years, so during the run of the show I started to work on my voice just for voice production. I continued with it when I started to work on this show and took a lesson every day for months, then taped the lessons and took them on tour with me. And that's what I have done in London. I went back to New York, took some more lessons, and I've got them with me now. So I'm still taking lessons."

"I don't think I will ever be a singer in all my life, but I get a little bit better. Not too much. Frankly, I don't pretend to be a singer — just an actress who sings. This part doesn't really require a singer. It's more important to act the songs."

Actually, almost every lyricist would much rather have an actor or actress perform so that the meaning is conveyed and the words are heard, and that's very much so with 'Applause,' which is a play set to music. It's very much the same way as Rex Harrison acted his singing in 'My Fair Lady.'

It's not surprising that so many writers have hit on the tagline, "Clap hands, here comes Lauren," in "Applause."

ROUNDS OF APPLAUSE — creating her Tony-Award winning role in the special television version of the hit Broadway musical.

"Applause," Lauren Bacall throws herself into the production number of "Bat Alive." The show will be on Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. MST.

Six CBS network shows capture coveted awards

Three entertainment specials, two presentations of CBS News, and a four-part series on "Camera Three," all broadcast on the CBS Television Network during the 1971-72 season, received Christopher Awards for distinguished achievement in television.

The recipients were "APPOINTMENT WITH DESTINY," "CORTEZ and Montezuma: The Conquest of an Empire," "The House Without a Christmas Tree," and "The Prince and the Pauper" in the entertainment specials category; "I.E.E.A.A.," an edition of the CBS News Television magazine, "60 MINUTES," and "The Mexican Connection," a segment of "CBS REPORTS," both presentations of CBS News, and, on "Camera Three," the four-part entitled "The City in the Image of Man: Ideas and Work of Paolo Soleri."

Warren Bush, executive producer, and Robert Guenette, producer, director and writer, received the award for the "APPOINTMENT WITH DESTINY" special, a chronicle of the conquest of the Aztec empire, which was cited by the Christophers for presenting "a vivid impression of what it (the event) may have been like."

Producer Alan Shayne, director Paul Bogart and scriptwriter Eleanor Perry were recipients of the award for "The House Without a Christmas Tree." Miss Perry's adaptation of an autobiographical short story by Gail Rock based on her memories of Christmas 1946. The special was lauded for its perception in "telling us something about ourselves and about Christmas." For "The Prince and the Pauper," an animated adaptation of the Mark Twain classic, chosen for fulfilling the demands of entertainment and education by "introducing young audiences to the great literature of the world in a manner reflecting the spirit of the original story." Recipients were Walter J. Hucker, producer, Chris Cuddington, director of animation, and John Palmer, scriptwriter.

The "60 MINUTES," "I.E.E.A.A." edition, an examination of the effectiveness of I.E.E.A.A. (Law Enforcement Assistance Administration), was cited for its "on the spot reporting," and as "a telling documentation of how our tax dollars can be misspent." Receiving the award were Norman Gorin, "I.E.E.A.A." producer, and Don Hewitt, executive producer of "60 MINUTES."

Burton Benjamin, executive producer, and Jay McMillen, producer and reporter, received the award for the "CBS REPORTS" segment on "The Mexican Connection," an investigative report cited as "an eye-opening account of how difficult it can be to seal the United States borders against drug smugglers."

The award for the "Camera Three" four parts series on Paolo Soleri, presented last spring on the Network and lauded by the Christophers for "introducing us to one of today's leading architects and to his vision," was presented to Merrill Bruckway, executive producer and director, and Stephen Chodakov, writer.

Commenting upon the awards, the Rev. Richard Armstrong, M. M., director of the Christophers, stated that "These awards try to honor those individuals who have used their God-given talents to provide high quality literary and entertainment for general audiences."

The Christophers organization, founded in 1943 by the Rev. James Keller, is actively engaged, especially in the fields of education and mass communications, in promoting the power and responsibility of the individual to provide constructive solutions to major social issues.

Green Thumb: Gardenia irks people

George Abraham

Gardenia irks people: This plant causes more aggravation to people who try to grow it than any other plant. Still, we'll get many letters from folks telling us how easy it is to grow.

Bud drop is the No. one complaint. Often it's the result of a change in environment — from a moist greenhouse to a drafty, arid home.

To give the plant a controlled, humid atmosphere, syringe the buds and leaves daily, and place a clear plastic sheet over the tent to simulate a greenhouse.

The soil should be kept constantly moist, but not soggy. Most fanciers place the gardenia pot on a tray or dish of pebbles partially covered with water.

No. two complaint is lack of buds. This can be due to a lack of light or soil not acid enough. Soils not acid can be made so by scratching into the surface a small amount of aluminum sulfate or sulfur dust. Repeat at intervals of six weeks.

Temperatures at night above 62 degrees are partially responsible for no buds, or for buds dropping. During the winter months give this tropical plant a warm, humid atmosphere where the temperature is 70 to 80 degrees in day, and the night temperature between 62 and 65 degrees.

If lower than this, plants will grow slowly.

No. three complaint is yellow foliage. Night temperatures lower than 62 degrees will cause foliage to become yellow-green. A deficiency of iron and a lack of acidity will also cause yellowing.

A disease known as gardenia canker may also cause yellowing. A portion of the side of the stem becomes dead. No control for this. Yellow foliage may also be due to nematodes which produce knotted, swollen lumps on roots. Destroy such plants.

Strangely enough, the camellia is easier to flower indoors. In winter, they love a cool room or porch with the temperature just above freezing, 40 to 50 degrees.

In summer put the plant outdoors in partial shade, and keep it watered. Feed a little liquid plant food in December. Plant can be pruned any time for shape. The big secret for bushels of camellia blossoms is to keep the plant cool.

Grow cotton at home: You won't get rich at it, but cotton plants from seed make a fine project for kids at home or in school. Plant cotton seed in a rich, sandy soil, one inch deep, and water sufficiently. After the seed has sprouted, water the plant once every four days or so, or when the plant looks withered.

Grow in a sunny window. Kids like to see the white cotton blossom form and it turns pinkish over night, falling off the next day. Soon a cotton ball forms and when it bursts open, the white fluffy cotton comes forth.

Sunshine pulls the cotton out, making it fluffy and white. Just so you won't quit your job and go into raising cotton commercially at home, I'll cite one statistic: It takes about 1,600 pounds of field cotton to make 500 pound bale of lint.

The cotton plant is one of the nicest projects you can have in the home or in the classroom. If you don't know where to get cotton seeds, send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a source.

Under glass gardens: Terrariums are merely gardens grown in a glass or plastic container. People are using brandy snifters, glass jars of every sort, battery, pickles, gold fish bowls, rose bowls anything that's transparent.

Companies are making beautiful square and egg-shaped plastic containers for growing miniature gardens. These have tops which are removable. Humidity loving plants grow beautiful in a terrarium and you have to ventilate a little as moisture gathers on the inside, reducing visibility to a minimum.

Never use a cover for cacti and other desert plants as they will rot. Terrariums and bottle gardens need water added from time to time, depending how much is lost when you ventilate.

Some terrariums go years without much water, since the moisture is recycled back to the plants.

Start out with a mixture of equal parts of sand, peat and soil. Or use wood's earth, sprinkled on the bottom and sides. If you can get some moss in the woods, it's great. Place it face down in the container, as you want the green to show.

Spread a little white sand in a spot to give an appearance of a small lake or stream. A piece of broken mirror is wonderful for creating a lake effect. The average home owner doesn't have access to dwarf begonias, miniature orchids, small anthuriums, etc., so he has to use whatever is available.

Rampant-growing items such as wandering Jew, Coleus Plectranthus (tortillery-fern) can be used, but make sure you cut them back when they start to crowd. It won't hurt one bit. It's best to choose slow-growing plants in terrariums.

There are several creeping plants such as the mossy-leaved Selaginella, Baby's tears, Jade plant, mints and dozens of other items useful. As your collection gets bigger you'll find out which plants like humidity and shade, and which don't. Exchange yours with your neighbor.

Meanwhile, if you have a terrarium, please write and tell us which plants you like best in them.

Question of the week: D. E. of Twin Falls: "Please tell me why I had such poor luck starting seeds of flowers and vegetables. I took some soil from the garden, baked it in the oven and mixed it with peatmoss and perlite. The seed came up poorly, and what did come up soon died off."

First, I'd like to have you switch from using garden soil to one of the artificial soils which commercial growers use for starting seeds.

Growers have moved from soil to soil substitutes for several good reasons. The mix is practically sterile, free of diseases to mow off your seedlings. The starting material is loose, dived uniformly and plants take off in it fast. No weed seeds.

Your problem may be that the soil portion is too heavy for seeds to push up through. You can get the soilless mixes in garden stores and they come under a variety of common names such as Jiffy-Mix, Pro-Mix, Peat Earth, to name a few.

Some growers have a home-brewed mix of peat, vermiculite, redwood shavings, sand, hardwood chips, quick peat and other items which work out well, but for the home gardener, we suggest you buy a bag of ready-mixed soilless plant grower.

Perhaps you overwatered your seed flats. Once they start to sprout, move to a bright window and avoid heavy watering. You can't grow wrong if you try again, using one of the soilless mixes for starting seed and growing plants.

S. E. of Burley: "Please tell us what makes a good hanging basket. We want to hang two of them at the end of our carport."

You can buy plastic containers made purposely for hanging baskets, or you can make your own out of any material available. Make sure you have a small drainage hole in bottom. Use a soil mix of one part each sand, peat and loam, and you might want to add a little extra rotted compost or manure to this.

As for plants, try the florists asparagus (Sprenger) or Plumbago, vinca vine, or geranium ivy, coleus, petunias, shrimp plants, tuberous begonia, tuberous geranium, Martha Washington geranium, verbena, sweet alyssum, to name a few. Any of these items will give you a lot of color right up until frost.

That grand Irish brand of Bonhomie

SAN FRANCISCO — Few will contest the statement that San Francisco is the most ethnically exuberant city in the U.S.

Its citizenry refused to turn amorphous in the all-American melting pot.

No sooner has Chinatown's New Year dragon tucked in his centipede heels than the city's Japanese-Americans begin banging the taiko (thunder drums) for their mid-April Cherry Blossom Festival.

The interval in between belongs to the Irish.

It's hard to say how many San Franciscans there are of Irish birth or parentage. The figures range upward from 23,000. Telegraph Hill was an Irish stronghold in the 1970's, and such names as Kearny, Doyle, Phelan and Fitzgerald live the city map.

One thing's for sure. Practically everybody connected with the town's Gaelic gala sounds as if he arrived from the old sod last month. So infectious is the tongue-rolling, you're beguiled into a brogue by your name Schnittzel or Popodopopous.

Boston, New York and Chicago have their St. Patrick's bashes, but San Francisco's is something else.

To begin with there's a snake race which packs Zellerbach Plaza with an ebullient noon-hour crowd (March 16). Over 10,000 march in the mammoth Sunday parade (March 18). Ireland sends over its finest football and hurling teams plus plane-loads of fans and sportswriters to follow the action at Balboa Stadium (March 25 and April 1). And there's a whole round of dinners, dances and entertainments put on by local Irish societies.

But the grandest camaraderie can be found on March 17 in the city's score or more of Irish pubs.

Best known is Harrington's. There are two, run by the Brothers Harrington, at 245 Front Street and 9 Jones Street. The former's in the financial district and the latter's located strategically close to City Hall. Both are San Francisco institutions.

A few years back, when plans were announced for inclusion of an Italian Trade and Cultural Center in the projected Yerba Buena Sports and Convention Complex, a newsmen pointed out to Mayor Joseph Alioto that soon San Francisco's Japanese, Chinese and Italians could all boast ethnic centers. "What about the Irish?" he asked. "The Irish," replied the Mayor, "have Harrington's."

Last St. Patrick's Day, as commuters headed for their offices, a KSFO-Radio disc jockey decided to phone poll the pubs. He started with Harrington's East at 8:30 a.m. and asked if there were anything going on yet. "Well," said the publican, "we've got about forty warming up."

By noon the crowd trying to get inside had swelled to such volume and vigor that a cadre of San Francisco's finest was cordoning off the street.

Catering to an overflow of Irish congeniality elsewhere in the business district were Mooney's Irish Pub at 1525

Grant Avenue, McCarthy's at 1172 Market Street, Dublin House at 1666 Market, The Irish Pub at 633 Battery and Tara House at 230 Jackson.

SHE STARTED IN such Broadway shows as "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Call Madam," and she again electrifies her audience when she sings some numbers from her hit shows on "Ed Sullivan's Broadway" next Friday night on CBS.

Donna Mills makes a career out of terrifying roles

Donna Mills has made a career of playing young women caught in terrifying situations, and her latest film characterization is no exception.

In "The Bait," which airs on the ABC Television Network's "Tuesday Movie of the Week" March 13 (9:30-11 P.M. MST), Miss Mills plays an undercover policewoman who serves as the lure to trap a homicidal maniac.

"In all honesty, I can say my role in 'The Bait' is three-dimensional," Miss Mills said with a smile.

Actually, it's three parts in one. In the first place, she is a spunky policewoman. She goes undercover as a secretary working and living downtown, where the murderer is believed to be. Finally, when her investigation reaches an impasse, she poses as a floozy in a last-ditch effort to attract the killer.

"Although I never thought of a career as a lady cop, social work was my second choice. I can see a close kinship between an undercover policewoman and an actress. To be successful, both require a keen sense of the dramatic. I certainly admire the woman I play in 'The Bait,' not only as a performer, but as a person willing to face terrible danger."

Miss Mills, who started her career as a dancer in clubs and stage musicals, has recently found herself in jeopardy in the following film situations: as Clint Eastwood's girlfriend stalked by a female psychopath in "Play Misty For Me"; as a crippled girl tracked down by a murderer in "Night of Terror," a recent ABC "Movie of the Week"; and as a young woman who actually finds herself in hell in "Haunts of the Very Rich," another recent ABC "Movie of the Week" presentation.

"I don't mind playing these roles at all. They give an actress great dramatic leeway. In fact, I was worried for a time that my recent stories, 'The Good Life' with Larry Hagman, would type me a comedy actress. However, the tips I got from Larry on comedy timing will be invaluable to me in the future."

A veteran of the television soap opera gone ("The Secret Storm" and "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing"), Donna added: "I'm totally in-love-with acting. In fact, I'd like to do some heavy work on the stage in works by such authors as Eugene O'Neill, Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller and Anton Chekhov."

Looking at that list of playwrights, it's a cinch Donna Mills would still be a woman in distress.

Those visitors and cherry blossoms

Crowning of Queen April 13

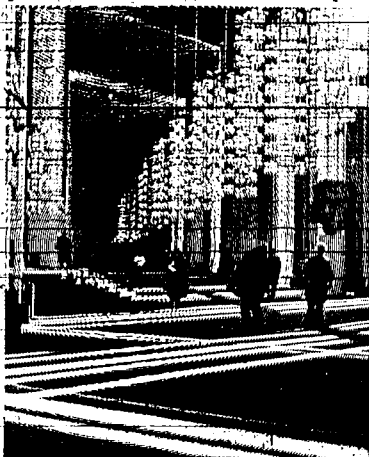

More than 25 million people are expected to flock to Washington, D.C., to help celebrate the 200th birthday of the United States.

The estimate comes from the Transportation Planning Board of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, which is investigating transportation needs for the nation's bicentennial in 1976.

If the prediction is accurate, Washington tourism faces an unprecedented increase. This year about 18.2 million persons will visit Washington, an increase of about 200,000 over last year. Present visitor totals, released by the Washington Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, already makes the District of Columbia and nation's tourism capital.

Where will everybody stay when they go to Washington in 1976? The Transportation Planning Board has the answer to that too. If figures that more than 13 million will stay in hotels and motels, 9.5 million will bunk with friends and the remainder will put up in campgrounds, dorms or not remain overnight.

Officials haven't yet announced details of the bicentennial program in the Nation's Capital, but at least there'll be a plethora of new attractions awaiting visitors. Nearly every construction project in Washington is targeted to open July 4, 1976.

All Washingtonians know that their famed Japanese cherry trees don't yield any cherries.

Sure, they're famous for their blossoms, and they were bred for show, not sustenance.

Not so, says Jim Lindsay, the National Park Service's chief horticulturist for the Washington area. Some of the trees do bear cherries, although most people never see the little fruits.

But the birds do, and they pluck them off quickly. Lindsay says that the Yoshino variety of cherry tree sometimes bears fruit. About 90 per cent of the trees around the Tidal Basin are Yoshino.

One of the rarer varieties, known as the "weeping cherry tree," occasionally bears fruit although the Park Service has only a few of them, located on -Malins Point.

US birthday will attract

When Washington, D.C.'s Cherry Blossom queen is crowned April 13, she'll be worth a quarter of a million dollars.

That's the estimated value of the famed Mikimoto crown which will be placed upon her head as the annual Cherry Blossom Festival draws to a close.

The girl who wins from among the field of 52 won't get to keep the crown, of course, but she'll get to wear it, briefly, which is closer than most people get to a quarter million dollars. And she'll receive a miniature replica of the crown, plus a pearl necklace, from Mikimoto as a remembrance, just for her trouble.

This year's winner will be the 17th girl to wear the crown, fashioned by the same artisans who constructed the Japanese imperial crown and the emperor's royal crown.

Yoshitaka Mikimoto of the famed Mikimoto Pearls, Inc., company of Japan donated the crown in 1957. He personally supervised its production and designed various designs, for considerably less valuable crowns. It required 50 days for 15 craftsmen to make the crown.

The crown is studded with 1,589 pearls, the largest 23 mm. in diameter, and the smallest, clustered on the points of the crown, measure 12 mm. The crown is eight inches in diameter and contains 38 ounces of 14-karat gold.

The Brady Bunch

Cindy and Bobby are picked to be tested for an appearance on a children's TV quiz show in "You Can't Win 'em All" on the ABC Television Network's "The Brady Bunch", Friday, March 16.

Cindy decides to prepare for the test while Bobby is confident that he can handle it without any effort. One of the Brady kids fails the test, the other develops a TV star personality.

Robert Reed stars as Mike Brady, Florence Henderson as Carol and Ann B. Davis as Alice. Maureen McCormick is seen as Marcia, Eve Plumb as Jan, Susan Olsen as Cindy, Barry Williams as Greg, Christopher Knight as Peter and Mike Lookinland as Bobby.

The Partnership

By JOANNE and LEW KOCH

I don't know how your husband lets you know when he doesn't want to spend money. Perhaps he comes right out and says, "Sorry, we can't afford that." Maybe he's conciliatory and says we'll buy it next year or for our 50th anniversary.

This is how Lew let me know he wasn't ready to make out a check for new draperies.

Whenever the subject of our shabby hangings, which the previous owners bought 18 years ago, came up, the ones I never draw for fear the holes will show, the ones that haven't hung right since we took them to the self-service cleaning machine and tried to put them back on the hooks, Lew would say, "Whatever you want, dear. You pick the drapes."

So I made an appointment with a decorator man recommended by a decorator friend as "honest; though you may not like his personality."

I asked the draper man to come at 8:30 p.m. so the kids would be in bed. I also picked a night when Lew was scheduled to go to a meeting.

Instead the man arrived at 6 p.m., as Lew proudly set down a platter of chicken he had barbecued. Hearing the door bell, Lew and I rushed over to greet the nervous little man who was balancing 10 sample books and blanching at the sight of my greasy-fingered children.

"Who was that?" Lew asked suspiciously. "The drapery man," I mumbled. "I was just going to look at a few samples. He was supposed to come later."

"Why didn't you tell me he was coming?" You said to leave the drapes to me. I'm not going to decide tonight anyway."

"You mean we're not going to decide tonight?"

"My mother, the expert, said we should be nice and act as if we're going to buy."

Lew tore through two sample books, stopping suddenly at a fabric exactly like the one already hanging unevenly on the wall and said, "I like this."

"I thought you were going to let me choose the drapes."

"Can't I offer an opinion? I only live here."

"But I don't want off-white antique satin. I was thinking of something like this."

And I showed him a print fabric that picked up all the colors in the room and was exactly what I had been looking for.

"That's terrible!" Lew said. "Typical KPH!"

"What's KPH?" asked the drapery man, trying to rub barbecue sauce off the gold and orange sheer sample.

"Kashner Provincial Bargain," snapped Lew. "I want something plain and casual, like this," he said, picking up last week's New York Times magazine section and showing the picture which featured a renovated brownstone housing a priceless art collection.

"How can you compare our place to theirs?" They have original Matisse's, sculptures, supergraphics, and a fantastic view of Manhattan. Our windows are smudged up against four large evergreens that completely block the view.

"Oh," said Lew, slapping the sample book shut. "So that's the way you want it."

He stormed downstairs taking the children with him, turned on "Hair" full blast, and proceeded to dance and sing in his lighthearted monotone.

"How many pairs do we need with this print fabric?" I shouted.

"Twelve - cost you about $250 complete," he shouted back, trying to open the door with his arm full of sample books.

Later that night, after Lew had stormed out to his meeting and returned at midnight, I asked him to explain his behavior.

"I don't think we can afford draperies this year."

94-year-old civic leader on program

On the forthcoming ABC News special, "Making Good in America," airing Monday, March 12 11-12 MST, an American who has viewed the changing scene since before the turn of the century offers his observations on today's youth.

He is 94-year-old Murray Seasongood, an author and practicing attorney in Cincinnati.

A little over 50 years ago attorney Seasongood and other Cincinnati civic leaders sparked a revolution to change the government of the city by introducing a charter rule far in advance of its time.

On "Making Good in America," Murray Seasongood looks at the young people of today from the vantage point of his vast experience.

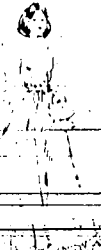

"I have the strong feeling," the attorney says, "that young people, as well as older people, are inherently decent. They want to do the right thing."

Seasongood believes "young people" are apt to be hopeful and energetic and they must be guided into the position of doing what they can. They must cultivate a geologic sense of time if they want reforms, but they must not let themselves diligently to do it." Young people "don't have to mean-awful-foolish, or run with the mob. They have to show some independence and spirit."

"I'm not giving a general denunciation of youth," the attorney notes. "That's the first sign of old age -- to denounce youth. Youth and crabbled age cannot be lived together, in the words of Shakespeare. And I don't like to think I'm either aged or crabbled."

St. Patrick's on air today

In connection with the observance of St. Patrick's Day (March 17), the ABC News religious-cultural series, "Directions," will televise the St. Patrick's Mass Sunday, March 11.

The St. Patrick's Mass, a religious celebration combining the traditional Roman Catholic liturgy with Irish folk music and themes, was filmed during its first presentation in North America on Jan. 27, 1972, at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C.

The mass, written by British composer Philip Greene, was performed in English by the 150-member orchestra and choir of Washington's Catholic University, with Robert Ricks as conductor.

Tony awards crew film background

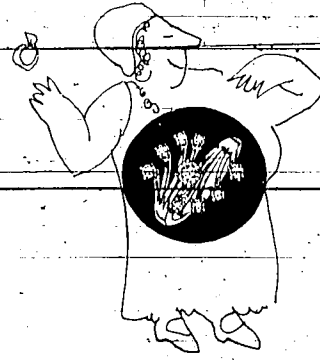

The Tony Awards camera crews have moved from Vienna and Yugoslavia to Paris and London as part of their mission to illustrate "The Wide World of Broadway," this year's theme for the American Theatre Wing's Tony Awards, to be presented on the ABC Television Network Sunday, March 26 (10-11 p.m. MST).

In the French capital, producer Alexander H. Cohen, with director Clark Jones and writer Hildy Parks, found Annie Cordy starring in a smash hit version of "Hello, Dolly!" Tony Award winner Yul Brynner was also on hand to show the crew around town. "Hello Dolly!" is playing at the Moga Dor theatre in Paris.

An exciting new production of the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein musical, "Showboat," at the Adelphi Theatre, has been attracting rave reviews and standing-room-only crowds in London. Peter Ustinov, actor-writer-director and man-about-London, leads American audiences through a guided tour of the West End London's fascinating theatrical district. From London, Cohen and his crew continue their quest for other exciting examples of Broadway abroad.

Hosting the Tony Awards are Rex Harrison and Celste Holm, with Sandy Duncan and Jerry Orbach as co-hosts. An impressive list of theatrical stars will shortly join the cast as performers or presenters.
